Value Of Birds:

The Value of Birds Antony William Diamond, Fern L. Filion, 1987 Wildlife tourism is an increasingly important source of foreign exchange for developing countries while in the industrial world revenues from birdwatching run into hundreds of millions. Birds are hunted for recreation and subsistence; their eggs harvested; their feathers used in traditional ceremonies. Birds are also recognised as one of the most important indicators of the state of the environment. This book provides many examples of the value of birds as socio-economic resources and bio-indicators while never losing sight of their intrinsic value. Crammed with bracing counter-arguments to those who see conservation as indifferent or hostile to human interests. Why Birds Matter Çagan H. Sekercioglu, Daniel G. Wenny, Christopher J. Whelan, 2024-05-31 For over one hundred years ornithologists and amateur birders have jointly campaigned for the conservation of bird species, documenting not only birds' beauty and extraordinary diversity but also their importance to ecosystems worldwide. But while these avian enthusiasts have noted that birds eat fruit, carrion, and pests; spread seed and fertilizer; and pollinate plants, among other services they have rarely asked what birds are worth in economic terms. In Why Birds Matter, an international collection of ornithologists, botanists, ecologists, conservation biologists, and environmental economists seeks to quantify avian ecosystem services, the myriad benefits that birds provide to humans. The first book to approach ecosystem services from an ornithological perspective, Why Birds Matter asks what economic value we can ascribe to those services, if any, and how this value should inform conservation. Chapters explore the role of birds in such important ecological dynamics as scavenging, nutrient cycling, food chains, and plant-animal interactions, all seen through the lens of human well-being to show that quantifying avian ecosystem services is crucial when formulating contemporary conservation strategies. Both elucidating challenges and providing examples of specific ecosystem valuations and guidance for calculation, the contributors propose that in order to advance avian conservation we need to appeal not only to hearts and minds but also to wallets. The Economic Value of Birds to the State Frank Michler Chapman, 1903 The Economic Value of Birds to the State Frank Michler Chapman, Louis Agassiz Fuertes, 1900 The Importance of Bird Life George Inness Hartley, 1922 Economic Value of Birds to the State Frank Michler Chapman, 1903 The Practical Value of Birds Junius Henderson, 1927 Bulletin California. Fish and Game Commission, 1912 Bulletin, 1930 The Oölogist, 1877 Social Value of Bird Conservation on Private Lands in Pennsylvania Sadikshya Sharma, 2021 Forest management can enhance ecosystem services and protect species diversity by enhancing habitat for wildlife. Unfortunately, the number of birds in North America has fallen by 29% since 1970, primarily because of habitat loss. Most forests in Pennsylvania are privately owned (70%), which implies the need for private lands to maintain the sustainability of bird populations for the foreseeable future. Since most bird conservation benefits will go public, it is important to understand public support for bird-friendly forestry on such private lands. However, the public demand for bird-related ecosystem services on private lands is not well understood. A statewide web survey was used to collect panel responses from 821 households in Pennsylvania An adjusted sample of 656 observations was used in Chapter 2 and 690 observations in Chapter 3 The survey contained Likert scales to measure relevant conservation attitudes and a choice experiment to measure willingness to pay WTP for eight different bird conservation programs Survey questions also measured public knowledge and perceptions of birds and their habitats Data were analyzed using both mixed logistic regression and descriptive statistics Respondent scores on the attitude knowledge and perception questions were included as co variants in the regression model Findings indicate that many people have limited knowledge about birds but strong concerns about their future condition Most respondents also had positive attitudes towards birds timber harvesting and landowner assistance programs The mean annual WTP across all proposed bird forestry programs was found to be 11 83 per household When this value was extrapolated to 50% of households in PA statewide demand for bird conservation was estimated to exceed 47 million annually Overall the magnitude of demand for bird conservation along with knowledge and attitudinal positions suggests that public investment in bird conservation on private lands is a legitimate strategy for enhancing public welfare and sustaining bird populations
