Carsey, 1992-04-08 Published by the American Geophysical Union as part of the Geophysical Monograph Series Volume 68 Human activities in the polar regions have undergone incredible changes in this century Among these changes is the revolution that satellites have brought about in obtaining information concerning polar geophysical processes Satellites have flown for about three decades and the polar regions have been the subject of their routine surveillance for more than half that time Our observations of polar regions have evolved from happenstance ship sightings and isolated harbor icing records to routine global records obtained by those satellites Thanks to such abundant data we now know a great deal about the ice covered seas which constitute about 10% of the Earth's surface This explosion of information about sea ice has fascinated scientists for some 20 years We are now at a point of transition in sea ice studies we are concerned less about ice itself and more about its role in the climate system This change in emphasis has been the prime stimulus for this book
