ABSTRACT

This text presents a reformulation of the model that Alan Bowness — former director of the prestigious London's Tate Gallery — used to represent the way in which an artist achieves success. The reasons why the modification of the cited model seems coherent are presented from a theoretical and pre-experimental perspective. The results intend to be coherent and plausible. Nevertheless, they are generic and can differ in different specific contexts. Our conclusion is that Bowness model is outdated and does not show the current paradigm of art and its market, being this reformulation necessary. On the other hand, it must be clarified that when we refer to 'success', we are referring to a success which is primarily economic, or derivate from the economic one.

KEYWORDS: Art Market, Art World, Artist, Bowness, Institutional Theory.

1. Introduction

1.1. Methodology

This conceptual paper is based on the book of the "The Conditions of Success: How the Modern Artist Rises to Fame" (Bowness, 1990). This book was intended to present a social system where the recognition of an artist between different agents could be understood as an advance for that artist's success.

According to this book, Bowness considered that to achieve success, an artist needed, in this order, the recognition of other artists, critics, dealers and, finally, the public. Years later, David Galenson (2005) wrote "Anticipating Artistic Success (or, How to Beat the Art Market): Lessons from History", where he proposed an update of this dynamic after noticing the differences that took place within the art world. In fact, he suggested exchanging the position between the dealer and the critic. As a consequence, his proposal would consider as the agent, the dealer, the critic and, finally, the public, as the normal flow of information to achieve the success.

In this article, we present a new revision of that model. This revision is based on an initial observation susceptible of being analyzed in greater detail.
