

A 360-degree panoramic view of a miniature landscape. The scene is centered around a large, dark blue, semi-transparent sphere. Surrounding the sphere are four circular platforms, each containing a different type of miniature vegetation: green moss, blue-tinted succulents, and other small plants. The background is a clear, light blue sky. The overall composition is symmetrical and visually appealing, suggesting a theme of environmental design or landscaping.

Proceedings of the Ninth Conference on Quantum Field Theory Under the Influence of External Conditions (QFEXT09) Kimball A. Kierkegaard has long been known as a philosopher and theologian, but his contributions to psychology, anthropology, and sociology have also made an important impact on these fields. In many of the works of his complex authorship, Kierkegaard presents his intriguing and unique vision of the nature and mental life of human beings, individually and collectively. The articles featured in the present volume explore the reception of Kierkegaard's thought in the social sciences. Of these fields, Kierkegaard is perhaps best known in psychology, where The Concept of Anxiety and The Sickness unto Death have been the two most influential texts. With regard to the field of sociology, social criticism or social theory, Kierkegaard's Literary Review of Two Ages has also been regarded as offering valuable insights about some important dynamics of modern society.

The Influence of Teacher-Student Relationships and Feedback on Students' Engagement with Learning Roger Wood, 2018-06-11

This book presents a potential hierarchy between the three basic psychological needs central to Self-Determination Theory (SDT). Findings from the author's research suggest that the motivation to exercise autonomy is an outcome that is cumulatively influenced by the perceived quality of the teacher-student relationship and students' perceived competence within specific learning contexts and with a specific teacher. These findings are the basis for three hypotheses regarding students' motivation to engage with learning activities. The first is that perceived competence is informed by and reciprocally informs the quality of the teacher-student relationship. The second is that students' perceived competence and the quality of the teacher-student relationship have a combined impact upon students' autonomous motivation. The final point is that a teacher can be autonomy-supportive both prior to and during activities where students have opportunities to exercise their autonomy. Such autonomy support includes the influence of teacher feedback upon students' perceived competence and their subsequent motivation to autonomously engage with learning activities. This research begins to unravel such motivational interplay through an SDT-informed model which is used as the basis for discussing the specific influence of teacher feedback and autonomy support upon students' engagement with learning activities in formal learning settings. The findings and model are worthy of further testing and development as part of the wider agenda of student engagement, wellbeing, and positive psychology prevalent in educational research, education psychology, and the philosophy of social motivation.
