Spice Crops:

Spice Crops E. A. Weiss, 2002 Many plants have been used for centuries as sources of spices for culinary use Recently there has been an upsurge of interest in diversifying the range of such spices and in their agronomy as alternative crops in both temperate and tropical countries This book provides a scientific review and guide to the botany and agronomy of the major families of plants used for the production of spices Contents include world production and trade and chapters on Cruciferae Lauraceae Leguminosae Piperaceae Solanaceae Umbelliferae Zingiberaceae and Minor crops Cultivation of Spice Crops Azhar Ali Farooqi, B. S. Sreeramu, K. N. Srinivasappa, 2005 Spices constitute an important group of agricultural commodities which since antiquity have been used for flavouring foods Some species are used in the pharmaceutical perfumery cosmetics and related industries and others possess colourant preservative antioxidant antiseptic and antibiotic properties India is one of the leading spice producing and exporting countries in the world In addition large quantities of spices are consumed within the country for seasoning of food and for several other purposes No other country in the world has such a diverse variety of spice crops as India This book reflects the intensive research carried out on this group of 42 spice crops since 1971 The improvement in agro techniques and the release of many high yielding varieties It provides exhaustive information on all aspects of cultivation harvesting and processing of each crop and will be an invaluable aid to students teachers and growers of spice crops both individual and corporate

Plantation and Spices Crops Chadwick Hillam, 2017-10 A plantation is a large scale farm that specializes in cash crops and cultivated on an extensive scale in a large contiguous area owned and managed by an individual or a company The crops include tea coffee rubber cocoa coconut arecanut oil palm palmyrah cashew cinchona etc These plantation crops are high value commercial crops of greater economic importance and play a vital role in a nation economy Probably the single most important factor a plantation has on the local environment is the site where the plantation is established If natural forest is cleared for a planted forest then a reduction in biodiversity and loss of habitat will likely result In some cases their establishment may involve draining wetlands to replace mixed hardwoods that formerly predominated with pine species If a plantation is established on abandoned agricultural land or highly degraded land it can result in an increase in both habitat and biodiversity A planted forest can be profitably established on lands that will not support agriculture or suffer from lack of natural regeneration However the prospects of spice crop production are bright because of its high market demand The most common type of spice crops grown are onion garlic ginger black pepper hot pepper celery shallots leek bay leaf and tanglad Among these crops however only onion garlic ginger black pepper and hot pepper are grown commercially because of their high market demand and usefulness Spices are primarily used as food seasoning In addition to their culinary uses spices are also utilized as flavoring agent in beverages active ingredient in syrubic medicines coloring agent of textiles and an important constituent in cosmetic and perfume products This Book Plantation and Spices Crops presents an overview of the importance of plantation crops and spice plants as well as the current status of the cultivation of these crops It covers plant production aspects such as climate and water requirements planting fertilizers irrigation weeding and hoeing and harvesting processing and pest and disease management This book is intended for advanced graduate students and practitioners of agriculture and horticulture and those who are involved in the production and promotion of plantation crops spice plants and essential oil and medicinal plants
