Developing Effective Drug Education Programs Lowell Horton, 1992 This booklet discusses obstacles to effective drug education programs and suggests components that should be included in order to ensure effective programs The first section presents six questions to ask of one's drug education program noting that a poorly conceived program can do more harm than good The second section focuses on convincing students to delay beginning use of alcohol Ten warning signs of drug and alcohol use are presented in the third section These signs range from a drop in grades to a display of obvious behavior associated with intoxication or drug use The fourth section discusses confronting social attitudes toward alcohol use This section describes myths associated with alcohol use and the distorted messages which children receive from beer commercials The fifth section provides the following suggestions for designing effective drug education programs 1 articulate goals of the program 2 focus on the gateway drugs 3 start early 4 plan a comprehensive program 5 provide teacher inservice 6 mobilize positive peer pressure 7 involve parent networking and 8 build evaluation into the program An annotated bibliography of references and resources is included ABL

The Portfolio Approach to Assessment Emily Grady, 1992 The shortcomings of standardized testing as the predominant form of student assessment in the United States are reviewed and the use and potential benefits of portfolio assessment are explored Children's educational experiences and their future job prospects and standards of living are being decided by test scores Moreover these test scores may be unfair or biased against some students Instead of more tests we need a new attitude toward assessment one that encourages a variety of assessments Portfolio assessment through collections of student works can be an encompassing format for this new philosophy Before considering what a portfolio should contain it is important to establish the purpose of the assessment The experiences of Vermont illustrate the development of a portfolio assessment with consistent standards Examples of guidelines for mathematics and language arts portfolios make it clear that it is possible to establish consistent practices It is also necessary to reflect on the portfolio occasionally using self evaluations and direct questions or profiles Educators also find portfolios useful tools for preservice teachers Portfolio assessment can be the framework for a new curricular structure that integrates assessment into the learning loop SLD

State Academies for the Academically Gifted James E. Green, 1993 This guide to residential state academies for academically gifted high school students discusses the history of this movement student characteristics curricula faculty outreach programs and evaluation The establishment of the nine existing state institutions is traced from the prototype the North Carolina School for Science and Mathematics to the most recent established in Alabama in 1991 Reasons for such schools are given ranging from the specialized curricula needed by such students to their need for peer support The question of elitism is addressed suggesting that such schools actually are egalitarian in that they provide an opportunity for all students from both poor and wealthy regions of the state to go as far as they can The various selection processes are described and compared noting that the use of holistic methods rather than standardized tests results in enrollments more consistent with the demographic profiles of the state's population. Curricula are discussed with special focus on the Indiana Academy Curriculum Criteria for selecting faculty are then briefly considered as are state academy outreach programs. The lack of comprehensive and systematic evaluation of these new institutions is noted. Contains 21 references. DB
