Janvier,2015-07-12 Excerpt from The Aztec Treasure House A Romance of Contemporaneous Antiquity God sends nuts to them who have no teeth which ancient Spanish proverb of contrariety comes strongly to my mind as I set myself to this writing By nature am I a studious book loving man having a strong liking for quiet and orderliness Yet in me also is a strain that urges me even along ways which are both rough and dangerous to get beyond book knowledge and to examine for myself the abstractions of thought and the concretions of men and things out of the consideration whereof books are made And I hold that it is because I have thus sought for truth in its original sources instead of resting content with what passes for truth being detached fragments of fact which other men have found and have cut and polished to suit themselves that I have gathered to myself more of it and in its rude yet perfect native crystals than has come into the possession of any other modern investigator About the Publisher
