Stockton,1899 The Late Mrs. Null (Classic Reprint) Frank R. Stockton,2017-10-11 Excerpt from The Late Mrs Null Miss Roberta s father was a man whose mind and time were entirely given up to railroads and al though he nominally lived in New York he was for the greater part of the year engaged in endeavors to forward his interests somewhere west of the Missis sippi Two or three months of the winter were generally spent in his city home At these times he had his daughter with him but the rest of the year she lived with her uncle whose household she di rected with much good will and judgment The old gentleman did not keep her all the summer at Mid branch He knew what was necessary for a young lady who had been educated in Germany and Swit zerland and who had afterwards made a very favor able impression in Paris and London and so during the hot weather he took her with him to one of the fashionable Southern resorts where they always stayed exactly six weeks About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in

The Late Mrs. Null Frank Richard Stockton,2014-05-27 There was a wide entrance gate to the old family mansion of Midbranch but it was never opened to admit the family or visitors although occasionally a load of wood drawn by two horses and two mules came between its tall chestnut posts and was taken by a roundabout way among the trees to a spot at the back of the house where the chips of several generations of sturdy wood choppers had formed a ligneous soil deeper than the arable surface of any portion of the nine hundred and fifty acres which formed the farm of Midbranch This seldom opened gate was in a corner of the lawn and the driving of carriages or the riding of horses through it to the porch at the front of the house would have been the ruin of the short thick grass which had covered that lawn it was generally believed ever since Virginia became a State But there had to be some way for people who came in carriages or on horseback to get into the house and therefore the fence at the bottom of the lawn at a point directly in front of the porch was crossed by a set of broad wooden steps five outside and five inside with a platform at the top These stairs were wide enough to accommodate eight people abreast so that if a large carriage load of visitors arrived none of them need delay in crossing the fence At the outside of the steps ran the narrow road which entered the plantation a quarter of a mile away and passed around the lawn and the garden to the barns and stables at the back

The Late Mrs. Null by Frank R. Stockton, Fiction, Fantasy Frank Richard Stockton,2004-08 He was fond of the idea that he went into the battle of life covered and protected by a great shield but that the inside of the shield was a mirror in which he could always see himself Looking into this mirror he now saw that if he did not soon get away from Miss Roberta he would lay down his shield and surrender
