The Undocumented Everyday Rebecca M. Schreiber, 2018-03-13 Examining how undocumented migrants are using film video and other documentary media to challenge surveillance detention and deportation As debates over immigration increasingly become flashpoints of political contention in the United States a variety of advocacy groups social service organizations filmmakers and artists have provided undocumented migrants with the tools and training to document their experiences In The Undocumented Everyday Rebecca M Schreiber examines the significance of self representation by undocumented Mexican and Central American migrants arguing that by centering their own subjectivity and presence through their use of documentary media these migrants are effectively challenging intensified regimes of state surveillance and liberal strategies that emphasize visibility as a form of empowerment and inclusion Schreiber explores documentation as both an aesthetic practice based on the visual conventions of social realism and a state administered means of identification and control As Schreiber shows by visualizing new ways of belonging not necessarily defined by citizenship these migrants are remaking documentary media combining formal visual strategies with those of amateur photography and performative elements to create a mixed genre aesthetic In doing so they make political claims and create new forms of protection for migrant communities experiencing increased surveillance detention and deportation unseenamerica Esther Cohen, 2006-05-09 Through the lenses of donated cameras this inspiring collection of photographs serves as a testimonial to the lives of people society often overlooks the working class They are everywhere the low wage workers who make our clothes look after our children and open our doors They are the millions of people who form the fabric of our society but theirs is a world rarely seen In unseenamerica a program created by Esther Cohen thousands of workers were given cameras and lessons in photography and then asked to document their lives Through this collection of black and white images sometimes poignant sometimes celebratory and always honest the workers gave voice to their lives A lot of people assume you are what your job is taking out garbage or fixing plumbing says Sam Contreras a building maintenance worker and participant in the program They don't realize that there's an artful soul to everyone From a worker who photographed a horse and buggy because she says she feels like the horse to a well known Chinese architect turned trucker whose photograph of a bridge represents his path from that life to this one the moving stories and images in unseenamerica give an authentic and much needed look into the lives of working people
