

COUNTERFACTUAL THINKING

Counterfactual thinking refers to the cognitive process of imagining alternatives to events or situations that have transpired.

DEFINITION

Counterfactual thinking involves thinking through "what if" scenarios to imagine alternatives to the current course of events. It involves the exploration of alternate possibilities.

It most commonly occurs when a person is reflecting on a mistake or missed opportunity. For example, you might think back and say "if only this happened, my life would be so much different now."

EXAMPLES

The Missed Job: If someone missed a job opportunity, they may imagine scenarios where they had gotten the job and how their life would be different.

The Car Accident: If someone gets into a car accident, they may imagine different scenarios where they could have avoided the accident, such as if only we took a different route to work that day.
