THE THIRD AMERICAN REVOLUTION

About the Authors

A biography of Samuel E Yette would read like an overview of contemporary history: the Great Depression, the Korean War, racial segregation in the South, civil rights, the Peace Corps, detente with China, Yasser Arafat and the PLO. As a young reporter in 1956, he teamed with photographer Gordon Parks to produce Life magazine's series on segregation. Later he worked for the Afro-American newspaper, Ebony magazine, and the Dayton Journal Herald before being named Executive Secretary of the Peace Corps. That was followed by two years with the Office of Economic Opportunity. In 1968 Yette joined Newsweek as a Washington correspondent for four years; but was fired after publication of his controversial book The Choice: The Issue of Black Survival in America, now recognized as a classic of political literature. Since 1972 he has taught journalism at Howard University in Washington.

Yette points to his assignment with Gordon Parks for Life as the beginning of his understanding of the power of photography. "As reporter, researcher, pack-horse, camera-loader, Klan scout, front-man and chauffeur for Gordon, I began to appreciate the importance of photography as a powerful—and sometimes indispensable—tool in modern storytelling. On train rides, he would stack up magazines or newspapers and have me select the best and worst pictures, and tell why. I learned also of the responsibility the journalist assumes for the welfare of those he exposes in his process."

Since that assignment, Yette has used his camera to document some of the most significant news events of modern times. In 1977, he was one of five journalists invited to China; he has also photographed life in the USSR and was the only journalist permitted to accompany the Southern Christian Leadership Conference on its peace mission to Lebanon in 1979. These and other experiences have provided Yette with a large and highly exclusive stock image file which he markets himself to magazines, organizations, and individuals. A photograph of the Great Wall from his China tour was sold as a poster at the China pavilion during the World's Fair in Knoxville.

Although freelancing is a small part of Sam Yette's life, he considers it an important one. "I am pleased that my freelance work is good enough to finance my travels at home and abroad, but my plans are much bigger than that, involving books, posters and scenic cards. The Great Wall poster alone largely financed the republication of my book, which served to establish my own publishing company, Cottage Books. My plan is to publish top-quality books by other authors and, in time, to include my own photographic work."

Samuel E Yette understands the power of the camera, and with it seems certain to continue making photographic history.

CO-AUTHORS are a father-and-son team, Samuel E Yette (left) and Frederick Walton Yette. Born at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., in 1959, one year before the sit-ins began, four years before the 1963 March, and five years before the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the younger Yette is historically a child of the Third American Revolution. An athlete and high school honor graduate from a Washington-area high school, he was graduated somma cum laude from Hampton Institute in 1981, and from the Harvard University School of Law in 1984. He plans a career in law and literature.
