Alices Derives in Devonshire Phil Smith, 2014-12-01 World of Fact The novel draws on the author's longtime exploration of psychogeography Situationism drift and derive and fleshes out his practice of mythogeography through the curious mind of a young girl exploring the gaps between her parents' respective worlds and her own between the city that she sees and the one that she finds when she walks out into it between the layers of possible experience It's a quite remarkable journey for anyone interested in those subjects in what it's like to upgrade whether as an adolescent or as an adult or in the tears in the fabric of things that we mostly manage to ignore World of Dream Can a city fall to bits one day and put itself back together the next I think so but I am crazy So why should you believe me Dad says it's OK to be mad Bad is the problem And the city is bad I saw its badness For one day its glass was everywhere like broken teeth after a fight between lions and sharks Big buildings leaning on each other like drunk dinosaurs The new shopping centre was a cave full of smoke And everyone was frightened of each other But I wasn't frightened I could see that between the pieces of glass were shining gaps And in the biggest building were passageways and tunnels and I could see that that was the good city The city of holes and caves Between the bad was the good but only if you knew that before you looked A little while later I'm not sure how long because that was when I was ill again the bigger cities burned for real life had a really bad dream By then though I knew that the cities were always ruins no matter what they looked like And that you had to know how to see fire to find warmth

Learning to Live Indoors Alison Acheson, 1998 Alison Acheson writes stories of domestic life of marriages children the family dog toothbrushes In every one of her stories the reader recognizes home and is moved by the delicacy the intensity and the subtle rightness of the author's observation and invention Acheson writes of her work I have come to realize that short stories come and go They are shadows visiting your doorway They don't venture in You must woo them and quickly lest they move on They always will move on And don't worry them don't play too long Don't look at their underbellies until they're complete and able to turn over on their own Short stories are unlike novels moving in with their bloody baggage rather like the mother-in-law in Learning they take over whatever room is spare or not so spare and there they are setting up their family photos the stay will be a long one eating through your fridge taking too long in the bathroom And while you are explaining to them that they cannot leave their underwear flapping on the bit of roof below the dormer window a short story will escape letting out a little cry as its feet slip in the gravel just outside the kitchen door
