The Wondersmith Fitz James O'Brien, 2012-02-15 O'Brien's earliest writings in the United States were contributed to the Lantern, which was then edited by John Brougham. Subsequently, he wrote for the Home Journal, the New York Times, and the American Whig Review. His first important literary connection was with Harper's Magazine, beginning in February 1853 with The Two Skulls; he contributed more than sixty articles in prose and verse to that periodical. He likewise wrote for the New York Saturday Press, Putnam's Magazine, Vanity Fair, and the Atlantic Monthly. To the latter, he sent The Diamond Lens (1858) and The Wonder Smith (1859), which are unsurpassed as creations of the imagination and are unique among short magazine stories. The Diamond Lens is probably his most famous short story and tells the story of a scientist who invents a powerful microscope, discovers a beautiful female in a microscopic world inside a drop of water. The Wonder Smith is an early predecessor of robot rebellion, where toys possessed by evil spirits are transformed into living automatons who turn against their creators. His 1858 short story From Hand to Mouth has been referred to as the single most striking example of surrealistic fiction to pre-date Alice in Wonderland. Sam Moskowitz (1971)
