Audean Duespohl, 1985 The Language of Change Paul Watzlawick, 1993 In this groundbreaking book a world authority on human communication and communication therapy points out a basic contradiction in the way therapists use language Although communications emerging in therapy are ascribed to the mind's unconscious dark side they are habitually translated in clinical dialogue into the supposedly therapeutic language of reason and consciousness But Dr Watzlawick argues it is precisely this bizarre language of the unconscious which holds the key to those realms where alone therapeutic change can take place Therapeutic Communication in Mental Health Nursing Shira Birnbaum, 2017-02-17 Awarded first place in the 2017 AJN Book of the Year Awards in Psychiatric and Mental Health Nursing This book introduces an innovative technique for therapeutic communication in mental health nursing expanding the toolkit for nurses seeking to engage challenging patients who have not responded to more conventional therapeutic methods

Linking nursing communication to current research on metaphor and figuration it is illustrated with accessible clinical examples Metaphor is a key component of talk based psychotherapies But many of the patients whom nurses encounter in the inpatient setting are not good candidates for talk based approaches at least initially because they are violent withdrawn highly regressed or otherwise lacking a vocabulary to convey thoughts and feelings This book offers specific clinical examples of an approach called the gestural bridge This is a method for structuring games and physical activities which connect metaphorically to a patient s personal themes activating narrative and observational agency and enabling an exchange of meaning to begin at a time when conventional language is not available Rooted in what nursing theorists have called the embodied or aesthetic way of knowing this approach is both specific and easily grasped Drawing from contemporary work in literary theory semiotics metaphor theory cognitive science philosophy linguistics psychoanalysis and the arts Therapeutic Communication in Mental Health Nursing is important reading for advanced level practitioners students and researchers interested in communication and relationship building in nursing
