Treat Them Like Animals:

Dumb Animals and how to Treat Them Edwin Kirby Whitehead,1909 Dehumanization in the Global Migration Crisis Adrienne de Ruiter,2024-03-06 What does it mean to fail to recognise people's humanity This book analyses dehumanization in the global migration crisis to answer this complex question Drawing from interviews with refugees and asylum seekers Dehumanization in the Global Migration Crisis presents a philosophical yet empirically grounded account of what dehumanization entails While dehumanization is commonly used as a key concept in scholarship popular media and public debate to call attention to remediable harms faced by the forcibly displaced its precise meaning is far from clear A wide variety of practices is called dehumanizing ranging from international policies that confine people under undignified circumstances within refugee camps to using forced migrants as bargaining chips in political negotiations Yet how do these practices exactly deny the humanity of the persons involved What sense of humanity is at stake in the adversities that refugees asylum seekers and unwanted migrants face Through a detailed examination of victims descriptions of their lived experiences with dehumanization animalization objectification and brutalization De Ruiter finds that dehumanisation is best understood as a distinct form of moral exclusion that is characterised by blindness to the significance of their human subjectivity The book provides a critical discourse analysis of the usage of the term dehumanization in reporting on the global migration crisis and sets out what should be done to counteract the dehumanization of refugees asylum seekers and unwanted migrants Regarding Animals Arnold Arluke,Clinton Sanders,Leslie Irvine,2022-07 This book offers a critical update to the seminal text Regarding Animals It combines sociological analysis with ethnographic description to provide insight into the history and practice of how we as human beings construct animals and by extrapolation how we construct ourselves and others in relation to them The Human-Animal Relationship as a Subject of Citizenship Education Jennifer Bloise,2025-09-26 The aim of this book is to explore the human animal relationship as a new subject of political education and to make it accessible for critical reflection A guiding thesis is that society's relationship with animals is both political and problematic as it is shaped by power structures and rarely recognized as an issue due to its status as an unexamined norm To explore this topic the model of didactic reconstruction is employed A problem centered interview study is used to reconstruct students everyday conceptions of animals humans and their political relationship These conceptions are then compared with academic perspectives particularly from Human Animal Studies in order to uncover contradictions and taken for granted assumptions and to identify exemplary didactically fruitful approaches to the subject The author concludes that future engagement with the human animal relationship in the context of political education should be critically oriented toward power structures This would enable reflective and multi perspective political judgment on the human animal relationship making the invisible visible Our Fourfooted Friends and how We Treat Them ,1926

Imagining God Humberto Casanova,2020-02-05 An ever growing number of Christians are becoming more and more uncomfortable with the tenets of the church the stories of the Bible and the church's worldview Statistics show that these feelings easily escalate into a crisis of faith and for now their predicament is being resolved by leaving the church This book will certainly help dealing with the crisis by showing that the language of faith is built by a web of metaphors taken from the Ancient Near East We do not need to take biblical language literally but as parables for human values in need to be assessed critically

Basic Equality Paul Sagar, 2024-04-16 An innovative argument that vindicates our normative commitment to basic equality synthesising philosophy history and psychology What makes human beings one another's equals That we are basic equals has become a bedrock assumption in Western moral and political philosophy And yet establishing why we ought to believe this claim has proved fiendishly difficult floundering in the face of the many inequalities that characterise the human condition In this provocative work Paul Sagar offers a novel approach to explaining and justifying basic equality Rather than attempting to find an independent foundation for basic equality he argues we should instead come to see our commitment to this idea as the result of the practice of treating others as equals Moreover he continues it is not enough to grapple with the problem through philosophy alone by just thinking very hard in our armchairs we must draw insights from history and psychology as well Sagar writes that as things stand there appear to be no good arguments for believing in the truth of basic equality Indeed for much of Western intellectual history and social practice basic inequality has been the default position How is it then Sagar asks that in Western societies in a period of less than a century basic equality emerged as the dominant view Sagar approaches this not as a mere philosophical puzzle but as a dramatic historical development In so doing he shows us what is at stake when human beings treat one another as equals just because they are human beings
