War Of The Mines:

Naval Mines Michael Davis, AI, 2025-03-29 Naval Mines explores the significant yet often understated role of naval mines in shaping maritime strategy and military history. It delves into the evolution and deployment of these weapons, revealing how their cost effectiveness has made them potent equalizers in naval warfare. The book highlights how even technologically simple mines can disrupt powerful naval forces, forcing them to adapt tactics and invest in mine countermeasures. One intriguing aspect covered is how the strategic use of naval mines has influenced international law and maritime operations, raising complex ethical considerations that continue to shape naval doctrine. The book examines the principles of mine design, activation, and deployment, progressing through historical case studies such as the Russo Japanese War and the Iran Iraq War. By analyzing these conflicts, the book shows the effectiveness of different mine types and the countermeasures they triggered. It offers a unique perspective by blending technical analysis with historical insights, making it valuable for military historians, naval officers, and anyone interested in the strategic implications of mine warfare.

Mines Against Japan Ellis A. Johnson, David A. Katcher, 1973 Details the submarine surface and aerial mining campaign against Japan in World War II. Includes statistics on mines laid, casualties, and aircraft performance.

Fighting the Great War at Sea Norman Friedman, 2014-10-22 The overriding image of the First World War is the bloody stalemate of the Western Front, but although much of the action did occur on land, the overall shape of the war – even the inevitability of British participation – arose out of its maritime character. It was essentially a struggle about access to worldwide resources, most clearly seen in the desperate German attempts to deal with the American industrial threat, which ultimately levered the United States into the war, and thus a consequence of British sea control. This radical new book concentrates on the way in which each side tried to use or deny the sea to the other, and in so doing, it describes rapid wartime changes, not only in ship and weapon technology, but also in the way naval warfare was envisaged and fought. Combat produced many surprises, some like the impact of the mine and torpedo, are familiar, but this book also brings to light many previously unexplored subjects, like creative new tactical practices and improved command and control. The contrast between expectation and reality had enormous consequences, not only for the course of the war, but also for the way navies developed afterwards. This book melds strategic, technical, and tactical aspects to reveal the First World War from a fresh perspective, but also demonstrates how its perceived lessons dominated the way navies prepared for the Second.

The Development of Mine Warfare Norman E. Youngblood, 2006-06-30 In 1997, the International Campaign to Ban Landmines (ICBL) coordinated the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production, and Transfer of Anti-Personnel Mines and on their Destruction. As of mid-2005, 145 states had signed the agreement. The ICBL's efforts were in large part a response to the careless use of landmines in the previous fifty years. The history of mine use in warfare, however, goes back much further than the World Wars of the 20th century and includes both land and sea use. This first comprehensive study traces the technical tactical and ethical developments of mine warfare from ancient times to the present Beginning with mine warfare s roots in ancient Assyria and China Youngblood takes the reader through the centuries of debate about how these hidden weapons should be used A look at 19th century developments explores the intertwined development of land and sea mines and the inventors behind them including Robert Fulton Samuel Colt and Immanuel Nobel father of Alfred Nobel Subsequent chapters examine the use of mines in the American Civil War the Russo Japanese War both World Wars and the battlefields of the Cold War and chart key battles and technical innovations such as the development of air delivered munitions Finally the author addresses the ethical concerns raised by the careless mining namely the impact on civilians and the difficulties of de mining and the treaties that regulate landmine use Mining and Engineering World ,1906 Echoes of War Bernard Lovell,1991-01-01 This book presents a passionate first hand account of the development of the Home Sweet Home H2S radar systems during World War II It provides numerous personal insights into the scientific culture of wartime Britain and details the many personal sacrifices setbacks and eventual triumphs made by those actively involved Sir Bernard Lovell led the group that developed the H2S radar system to identify towns and other targets at night or during heavy cloud cover H2S was successful during the attack on Hamburg in January 1943 as well as the air war against U boats in the Bay of Biscay The Great War Herbert Wrigley Wilson,Sir John Alexander Hammerton,1916 Proceedings of the ...
