Sims,Serbrenia J. Sims,2006 It is the intent of this book to contribute to the ongoing dialogue on the important relationship of identifying an individual s learning style and the implications of how providing appropriate instruction in response to that and other styles can contribute to more effective learning and performance as mandated by calls for increased accountability and measures of learner learning success p xiii      Negotiations of the "new World" Sabine Selchow,2017 In this book I develop the argument that the omnipresence of the contemporaryadjective global is more than a linguistic curiosity I argue it is a politicalphenomenon and as such a valuable albeit unconventional object ofstudy for scholars outside the linguistics discourse I argue that the omnipresenceof the contemporary adjective global constitutes the discursive reproductionof a web of meanings that is best labelled new world As such the omnipresence of the contemporary adjective global constitutes a distinctdimension of the enduring contestation over the construction of the world Given the word s current popularity and unscrutinised existence as well asthe loaded nature of the web of meanings new world that it brings out Iargue this dimension is not just a minor matter but plays an important hence research worthy role in the contemporary symbolic struggle over theworld My conceptualisation of the omnipresence of the contemporary adjectiveglobal as the re production of a web of meanings new world is groundedin two central insights that arise from my empirical engagement with the adjectiveglobal The first of these two insights is the empirically groundedunderstanding that the contemporary adjective global is closely enmeshedwith the talk about different ideas associated with the word globalisation Icall this talk globalisation discourse As I demonstrate the contemporary adjective global has come to be used in the sense of outcome of globalisation This makes the adjective a new word What is new about the contemporaryglobal I argue is that it implies ideas that are associated with theword globalisation I develop my argument that the contemporary adjectiveglobal is best be taken as a new word by building on relevant discussionsamong lexicographers about when a word is appropriately called new aswell as by drawing on a theory of language and meaning according towhich language and meaning are not natural and referential but conventional and productive The second central insight that arises from my empirical engagementwith the contemporary global and that underlies my conceptualisation of theomnipresence of global as the re production of a web of meanings newworld refers to the word globalisation It is the insight that all utterances which contain the word globalisation can be seen as constituting a discursivere production of an object that is best labelled new world In other words my conceptualisation of the omnipresence of global builds on myunderstanding that what all uses of the word globalisation have in common despite and in addition to the myriad of meanings that are associated withthis word in whichever context it is used is that they imply the proclamation of a new world that came This insight makes what I call globalisation discourse different fromexisting conceptualisations under this label such as the one by Hay andSmith 2005 Normally the globalisation discourse is conceptualisedbased on a scholarly preconception of what the word globalisation refers to such as market integration or the spread of neoliberalism In contrast mysuggestion that we understand the uses of the word globalisation as a discursivere production of a web of meanings that is best called new world isgrounded in an approach that takes the polysemy of the word globalisationseriously In addition it builds on an elaboration of the question how andwhen the concept s globalisation and the neologism globalisation came tobe in the true Foucault 1981 61 i e became socially accepted and normal tools to grasp the world As I discuss in this book developments which have come to be addressedwith the word globalisation existed before this neologism becamepopular at the end of the 1980s and in the course of the 1990s Given thatmeaning is not inherent in social reality but conventional the question arises why a new word was perceived to be needed and accepted at the end ofthe 1980s and 1990s i e at that particular moment in time My answer tothis question is that this was because the end of the Cold War was perceivedto have brought out a new world for which existing conceptual tools wereperceived to be inadequate This new world was perceived as having produceda conceptual vacuum This is apparent in assessments such as that ofIR theorist James N Rosenau 1990 5 who argued after the end of theCold War that observers were left without any paradigms or theories thatadequately explain the course of events I argue it was this perceived vacuumthat opened the discursive door and let the concept s globalisation and the neologism globalisation step in to fill it Consequently the use ofthe word globalisation can be conceptualised as re producing and filling theconceptual space new world with meaning It is the synthesis of these two insights that allows me to conceptualisethe omnipresence of the contemporary adjective global as a distinct phenomenon namely as a discursive re production of a web of meanings called new world This phenomenon I argue in this book is relevant and interestingin two respects  YC Young Children ,2007  Handbook of Research on Web Log Analysis Bernard J.
