Topographic Brain Mapping of EEG and Evoked Potentials Konrad Maurer,2012-12-06 Imaging procedures have been used for many years and are becoming increasingly important in a number of medical disciplines This is due to recent technological advances primarily computerization The methods employed in CNS diagnostics are collectively referred to as neuroimaging and include procedures for investigating both cerebral morphology and cerebral function such as computed tomography CT magnetic resonance imaging MRI positron emission tomography PET and single photon emission computed tomography SPECT Topographic mapping of electroencephalograms EEG and evoked potentials represents one of the functional procedures and permits topographic imaging of EEG evoked potentials and magnetic fields The latter application includes not only magnetic fields evoked by stimuli relating to different sensory modalities but also endogenous and motor fields resulting from spontaneous brain magnetic activity as recorded by magnetoencephalograms MEG the magnetic complement of the EEG The advantage of recording electric and magnetic fields over other neuroimaging procedures is that these techniques are completely noninvasive and have extremely short analysis times in the millisecond range The aim of this book is to clarify the current state of this emerging technology to assess its potential for substantive contributions to brain research to delineate areas for further research and over all to envisage clinical applications in disciplines such as psychiatry neurology and neuropsychology
