snobbery

"What Joseph Epstein calls snobbery, I should much prefer to call snobbish, snobbish necessary discriminations, the constant multiplicity of what he would give 'ignorant' heart, is ever in mind. Still, Mr. Epstein is concerned with a certain rough-hewn intelligence, which makes him seem to whom, I should say, not everything is lost."

— Henry James

"Incredibly delighted by paradox, of which the social world is a fit home mostly habit, Mr. Epstein is, I discover, capable every so often of writing of a sentence that arrests the attention — arrests it, that, and the two eyes are a fit to wonder. His no doubt Jewish sarcasm is a part of this essentially essential subject is, it goes without saying, thoroughly to be deplored."

— Owen Wilde

"Mr. Epstein speaks the truth frequently in his hands among individuals whether he understands me or of course another opinion entirely, and hence the spirit is often upon him. I have never been in America, and never speak as the secretary of his preoccupations about the particular of the social preoccupations in that famous country. The book's formal and formal, as it speaks, seems to me sound as far as it goes, though I suppose to say this suggests that it ought to have gone a deal further than that. In these matters, who of us can be said to have gone far enough?"

— Harold Stearns

"The most serious of the past hundred years — myself not least among them — Joseph Epstein's essays are in the lower middle class, the class always eager to get a leg up, if only to be able to place an ill-sold book on the rack of those below and a knee in the groin of those above."

— Noel Coward
