Benjamin,2015-06-02 Excerpt from The Singing Voice After having read Mr Benjamin's remarks upon singing and having carefully sung each one of his progressive vocalizes myself I have no hesitation in saying that the vocal method here set forth is admirable and given good material upon which to work should with conscientious study be productive of excellent results It is absolutely essential however that individual voices be individually trained in order to overcome faults or to improve good qualities In singing as in every other art whether of peace or of war everything depends upon the man behind the gun the pupil is as it were the gun the master is the man who trains it the execution that the gun so trained performs must under proper guidance be effective It almost seems that less common sense is exercised by would be singers and those of their families who are enthusiastic about them than by persons who are preparing for other walks of life they think that nothing but voice is necessary and are usually oblivious to the fact that in this branch of art more care is needed than in any other not only in the actual schooling of the vocal organs but of the mind as well and of the body as a whole in order that strength may be acquired to withstand the great strain of a busy professional life The possession of a fine voice is as frequent among the uneducated as among the educated classes of society and it follows that as the former are much more numerous corresponding care should be taken in the all round mental training of the average pupil At this time when general education and particular regard for the English language is at such a low ebb in America I cannot too seriously impress upon all singers the absolute necessity of culture of refinement of mind and body of demeanor and of diction About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Dynamics of the Singing Voice Meribeth A. Dayme,2013-04-17 Every discipline tends to develop its own particular language and ways of communicating This is true also about the various disciplines that talk about and describe the human voice particularly as it relates to singing The aim of this book is to bridge any gaps in communication foster better understanding of the singing voice and encourage collaboration between those involved in performance teaching therapy and medicine Because there is increasing interest in research in all these disciplines creating a common ground for communication about the singing voice is essential for mutual understanding and for effective prevention and treatment of disorders in singers One object for the artistic and scientific professions is to understand each other better by finding a vocabulary and terminology which they can share and use effectively Difficulty in communication often arises when a singer or teacher of singing attempts to describe something sensory in nature by use of imagery and sign language to non singers including the health and medical professions and in the same way the use of obscure and sometimes frightening terminology by those in the medical sciences when offering explanations to singers Teaching and simple language was and is needed from both sides A number of advances are helping to create rapid change in bridging gaps in communication and in adding new information 1 The formation of Associations for Performing Arts Medicine on a national and international scale are bringing new awareness to those who work with singers and other artists
