

The book cover features a vertical split. The left side is a vibrant, warm-toned image of a sunset or sunrise over a body of water, with a bright sun partially obscured by clouds. The right side is a monochromatic blue image of a woman's face in profile, looking upwards with her eyes closed. The overall mood is serene and contemplative.

J. Locke,2001-01-01 A sun filled room with windows looking over the Channel is the kingdom of Stella Maris Star of the Sea Stella is not a sea nymph or deity but when we meet her first an invalid child confined to bed Even thus limited she exerts a tremendous power her unearthly beauty serenity and wisdom touching the lives of all those who come into her orbit Two young men John Risca and Walter Herold come to tell Stella stories of the world she cannot see and in their turn take back some particle of her calm Life outside Stella s room is cruel and holds horrors of which she should never hear Childhood however does not last forever and the time comes when she must leave her room and face adulthood and its trials not the least of which is love Stella Maris William John Locke,2022-10-27 This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work Scholars believe and we concur that this work is important enough to be preserved reproduced and made generally available to the public We appreciate your support of the preservation process and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant Stella Maris (Classic Reprint) William J. Locke,2018-01-10 Excerpt from Stella Maris The invention of this title must not be regarded as the supreme effort of the imagination of Walter Herold It would have been Obvious to anybody with a bowing acquaintance with the Latin tongue Her name was Stella and she passed her life by the sea passed it away up on top Of a cliff on the South coast passed it in one big beautiful room that had big windows south and west passed it in bed at on her back with never an outlook on the outside world save sea and sky And the curtains of the room were never drawn and in the darkness a lamp always shone in the western window so that Walter Herold at the foot of the cliff one night Of storm and dashing spray seeing the light burning steadily like a star may be excused for a bit Of confusion Of thought when he gripped his friend John Risca s arm with one hand and pointing with the other cried About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works American Ecclesiastical Review Herman Joseph Heuser,1918 Stella Maris - Primary Source Edition William John Locke,2013-09 This is a reproduction of a book published before 1923 This book may have occasional imperfections such as missing or blurred pages poor pictures errant marks etc that were either part of the original artifact or were introduced by the scanning process We believe this work is culturally important and despite the imperfections have elected to bring it back into print as part of our continuing commitment to the preservation of printed works worldwide We appreciate your understanding of the imperfections in the preservation process and hope you enjoy this valuable book
