Understanding the Process of Economic Change Douglass C. North, 2010-04-19 In this landmark work a Nobel Prize winning economist develops a new way of understanding the process by which economies change Douglass North inspired a revolution in economic history a generation ago by demonstrating that economic performance is determined largely by the kind and quality of institutions that support markets As he showed in two now classic books that inspired the New Institutional Economics today a subfield of economics property rights and transaction costs are fundamental determinants Here North explains how different societies arrive at the institutional infrastructure that greatly determines their economic trajectories North argues that economic change depends largely on adaptive efficiency a society s effectiveness in creating institutions that are productive stable fair and broadly accepted and importantly flexible enough to be changed or replaced in response to political and economic feedback While adhering to his earlier definition of institutions as the formal and informal rules that constrain human economic behavior he extends his analysis to explore the deeper determinants of how these rules evolve and how economies change Drawing on recent work by psychologists he identifies intentionality as the crucial variable and proceeds to demonstrate how intentionality emerges as the product of social learning and how it then shapes the economy s institutional foundations and thus its capacity to adapt to changing circumstances Understanding the Process of Economic Change accounts not only for past institutional change but also for the diverse performance of present day economies This major work is therefore also an essential guide to improving the performance of developing countries

Twisting in the Wind Oksan Bayulgen,2022-09-15 Why do governments insist on fossil fuels Why do renewables face uncertain and inconsistent legal and regulatory circumstances that slow their market share growth against fossil fuels Oksan Bayulgen studies the political determinants of partial energy reforms that result in tepid energy transitions and shifts the geographical focus from front runner countries of energy innovation to developing countries which have become the largest carbon emitters in the world Her in depth case study of energy policies in Turkey over the past two decades demonstrates that energy transitions are neither inevitable nor linear and that they are often initiated if and only when promoting renewables is in the interests of governing elites and stall when political dividends associated with energy rents change This book contributes to the debates on the nature and pace of energy transitions by analyzing the power dynamics and political institutions under which energy reforms are initiated and implemented over time This timely topic will be of interest to scholars policymakers energy investors and anyone interested in environmental studies Understanding the Process of tools such as green taxes or tradable pollution permits are bound to fail if they are not incorporated into an integrated multi dimensional and multi actor policy for structural change

American Indians in the Marketplace Brian C. Hosmer,1999

Over time these peoples came to understand how the market worked recognized that the broader economy operated according to market principles and learned how to adjust to it Hosmer reveals how their strategies of purposeful modernization brought relative economic independence and sometimes the respect and cooperation of local and federal governments how it helped chart a middle course betweenunchecked individuality and a communal ethos that might stifle economic development and how economic development and cultural values ultimately affected one another
