World in Transition 4 German Advisory Council On Global Change (Wbgu), 2013-09-13 At the start of the 21st century fighting poverty and protecting the environment are two of the most urgent challenges facing the international community Environmental changes will jeopardize people's survival to an even greater extent in the future and will hit the poor hardest

To meet these challenges it will be essential to breathe new life into the partnership between industrialized and developing countries. It will be equally essential to combine poverty reduction with environmental protection in an integrated policy structure spanning all levels from local to global. In this report the German Advisory Council on Global Change WBGU shows that global environmental policy is a prerequisite for global poverty reduction. WBGU analyses the relevant policy processes and delivers recommendations charting the way forward. With its interdisciplinary approach providing a complex and systematic analysis of the poverty environment nexus WBGU's latest report breaks new ground. Indira Gandhi's old convenient maxim was 'Poverty is the biggest polluter'. Put forward at the 1972 UN Conference on the Human Environment in Stockholm it has been sorely misused ever since to override environmental precaution and prioritize economic development strategies instead. The new WBGU report maps out a way to shape a coherent environment and development policy. This report revitalizes the Rio spirit and gives it a robust scientific base. Prof. Dr. Ernst Ulrich von Weizsäcker, Member of the German Bundestag MdB.

The Evolution of Economic Development in Africa Francis K. Mbroh, 2021-07-11. Within the theoretical framework of the trade-growth and structural transformation-growth nexuses, the book examines the evolution of African goods and service trade in terms of value and share of global commerce relative to other regions during the period 1948-2017. It also identifies and discusses discernible changes in the composition and structure of African exports and imports between 1995 and 2015 and their implications for economic development in Africa. The study attributes Africa's laggard trade performance during the period primarily to sub-optimal macroeconomic policies and lack of bold export development policies and initiatives among other factors. It also offers an incisive discussion of several inhibitions to the structural transformation of African exports and imports, including lack of finance, globalization, tariff and non-tariff measures in global markets. The discussion of the evolution of African trade during the period 1948-2017, based on statistics and publications of international organizations including the UNCTAD, the World Bank, and the African Development Bank among others, is the first of its kind in terms of scope and depth of review of African trade. The analyses of cross-border trade during 1948-2017 and their implications for Africa's economic development prospects constitute a useful reference material for academics and students of African and development studies and African and international policymakers.

Trade, Aid and Development Majda Bne Saad, Maura Leen, 2006. In recent years trade, aid, and development have been subjects of renewed political and public debate with the establishment of the World Trade Organisation, the adoption of the Millennium Declaration, increases in aid, albeit from low levels, and a growing recognition that human security for all ultimately requires a world free of poverty. This festschrift for Helen O'Neill, Professor Emerita of Economics at University College Dublin, examines the theory and practice of development co-operation over the past half century. It discusses key trends in development policy. The distinguished contributors from various disciplines, friends and former colleagues of Helen O'Neill, analyse the links between development policy and other aspects of countries' external and domestic policies They highlight how achieving policy coherence in support of international development objectives is not an easy task as conflicting national and international interests exist and policy choices are ultimately determined by political rather than technical agendas The diversity of analyses and perspectives on globalisation trade aid and development running throughout the book is testimony to the continuing importance and relevance of development studies at a critical juncture in international relations The range of analyses presented will stimulate and challenge readers ideas and perspectives on development in a globalising world
