Who's Afraid of Human Cloning? Gregory E. Pence, 1998-11-05 Human cloning raises the most profound questions about human nature our faith in ourselves and our ability to make decisions that could significantly alter the character of humanity In this exciting and accessible book Gregory Pence offers a candid and sometimes humorous look at the arguments for and against human cloning Originating a human being by cloning Pence boldly argues should not strike fear in our hearts but should be examined as a reasonable reproductive option for couples Pence considers how popular culture has influenced the way we think about cloning and he presents a lucid and non technical examination of the scientific research and relevant moral issues in the cloning debate This book is a must read for anyone who is concerned about the impact of technology on human life and for those with interests in medical ethics sociology and public policy

The Ethics of the Family Linda Oravec, Adam Potthast, Stephen Scales, 2010-03-08 Our families are our first and most important ethical training grounds But what is the family And what are our ethical commitments to our family members and to the broader moral community After a brief introductory chapter on basic ethical concepts and theories the essays in this volume provide readers with ethical analyses of issues ranging from same sex marriage to a controversial proposal to license parents The chapters cover love sex marriage parents and children the relationship between the family and the larger moral community and the influence of emerging technologies on the ethical issues inherent in family life The volume is intended to open up this exciting territory in applied ethics to those interested in philosophy family studies social work and to anyone who wants a deeper understanding of the ethical forces at work in this most basic social institution
