Taking Parenting Public Sylvia Ann Hewlett, Nancy Rankin, Cornel West, 2002 Taking Parenting Public makes a compelling case that parenting has become dangerously undervalued in America today It calls for a new investment both personal and public into the work of raising children and argues that we are all stockholders in the next generation With a foreword by Sylvia Ann Hewlett and Cornel West Taking Parenting Public crosses boundaries to bring together thinkers from diverse fields spanning the political spectrum It features contributions from distinguished experts in economics political science public policy child development public health history and the media While recent books have focused on working mothers or absent fathers Taking Parenting Public is the first volume to take a comprehensive look at the common struggles of parents. These essays go beyond the usual chest beating about busy parents torn between work and family demands to suggest bold solutions. Instead of the typical call for parent replacement, more child care, more after school programs, and more mentors, the contributors offer fresh strategies for parent replenishment, ways to put mothers and fathers back into the lives of their children, not only as economic providers but also as emotional and moral providers.

Honeywell's Working Parents Task Force Honeywell Inc. Working Parents Task Force, 1981. This publication provides a summary of the Honeywell Working Parent Task Force's recommendations on how to solve problems experienced by working parents. The Task Force consisted of three committees: the Employment Practices Committee (EPC), the Parent Education Committee (PEC), and the Child Care Facilities Committee (CCFC). After examining a variety of employment practices which affect working parents, the EPC found that the main problem experienced by these parents when managing work and family responsibilities was inflexible work schedules. Following an exploration of several alternative work options, the committee began a thorough evaluation of flextime. As a result, a working definition of flextime was developed. Current Honeywell policy and practices regarding flextime were identified, and local and national employers were surveyed about their flextime practices. The EPC concluded that Honeywell should adopt a flextime policy which endorses flextime wherever possible. The work of the PEC was based on the recognition of the challenges faced by working parents as they try to manage both work and family responsibilities. The PEC focused on the kinds of information needed by working parents and how best to present this information. The two major vehicles recommended for providing information to parents were working parents seminars and distribution of printed materials. Finally, the CCFC, after reviewing studies related to child care facilities in Minneapolis and conducting interviews with other large employers and professionals who deliver services to families and children, identified the 10 most serious problems faced by working parents and suggested several recommendations for overcoming these problems. A draft of the proposed flextime policy, as well as information about Minneapolis's Computerized Child Care Information Network and the CCFC's recommendation to develop on-site child care
