War Torn:

Rebuilding War-Torn States Graciana del Castillo, 2008-09-25 Post conflict economic reconstruction is a critical part of the political economy of peacetime and one of the most important challenges in any peace building or state building strategy. After wars end countries must negotiate a multi pronged transition to peace. Violence must give way to public security, lawlessness, political exclusion and violation of human rights must give way to the rule of law and participatory government. Ethnic, religious, ideological or class caste confrontation must give way to national reconciliation and ravaged and mismanaged war economies must be reconstructed and transformed into functioning market economies that enable people to earn a decent living. Yet how can these vitally important tasks each be successfully managed? How should we go about rehabilitating basic services and physical and human infrastructure? Which policies and institutions are necessary to reactivate the economy in the short run and ensure sustainable development in the long run? What steps should countries take to bring about national reconciliation and the consolidation of peace? In all of these cases unless the political objectives of peacetime prevail at all times, peace will be ephemeral while policies that pursue purely economic objectives can have tragic consequences. This book argues that any strategy for post conflict economic reconstruction must be based on five premises and examines specific post conflict reconstruction experiences to identify not only where these premises have been disregarded but also where policies have worked and the specific conditions that have influenced their success and failure.

Aid Policy in War-torn Countries Mafalda Duarte, 2003 The dynamics in the international system have led to aid policy shifts from just relief assistance towards attempts to support development in emergency situations. Aid Policy in War Torn Countries deals with the dilemma of whether development can be pursued in conflict situations and how it can and should be done. The importance and interest of the research rests essentially on its apparent paradoxical character. Author Mafalda Duarte divides the research into two parts. The theoretical focuses on identifying the dynamics of the new international system leading and arguments supporting the shift in terms of the aid paradigm from just relief assistance towards attempts to support development in emergency situations. Part two the empirical uses the opinions and arguments of the Angolan population sample to determine whether they believe in the possibilities and ways of pursuing development in Angola while in a conflict situation. The window left open at the end of the research relates to the importance of analyzing the implications of the increasing number of non nation state intermediaries for all types of development cooperation. On Their Own

Joyce Hoffmann, 2008-06-24 Staring back into another time. Called to the colors. Going against the grain. Challenging the conventional wisdom. Foreign journalists report the war. The war on television. A force of nature. A place in history. Slowly, As If Karen Press, 2012-11-01 Written by leading South African poet and feminist thinker Karen Press these poems are varied in tone and formal invention. Examining themes as diverse as imperialism, historical memory, urban planning, love, poets and folk dancing, this compilation adjusts its personal, political and ecological focus on a new South Africa in which a change of
