Where Flaubert Lies:

Where Flaubert Lies Claire Yvonne Addison, 1988 Where Flaubert Lies Claire Addison, 1996-05-31 This book opens crucial new perspectives on the vexing question of chronology in Flaubert's work. Claire Addison argues that Flaubert's manipulation of dates is deliberate and that what have previously been dismissed as inadvertent errors are in fact evidence of the strong presence of Flaubert's personal mythology in his work, creating links among his family life events in historical Europe and events in the life of his literary characters. Her reading sheds new light on the subtle and complex interplay between the life and work of the author.

Nabokov, History and the Texture of Time Will Norman, 2012 This book argues that the apparent evasion of history in Vladimir Nabokov's fiction conceals a profound engagement with social and therefore political temporalities. While Nabokov scholarship has long assumed the same position as Nabokov himself that his works exist in a state of historical exceptionalism, this study restores the content context and commentary to Nabokovian time by reading his American work alongside the violent upheavals of twentieth-century ideological conflicts in Europe and the United States. This approach explores how the author's characteristic temporal manipulations and distortions function as a defensive dialectic against history, an attempt to salvage fiction for autonomous aesthetics. Tracing Nabokov's understanding of the relationship between history and aesthetics from nineteenth-century Russia through European modernism to the postwar American academy, the book offers detailed contextualized readings of Nabokov's major writings, exploring the tensions, fissures, and failures in Nabokov's attempts to assert aesthetic control over historical time. In reading his response to the rise of totalitarianism, the Holocaust, and Cold War, Norman redresses the commonly expressed admiration for Nabokov's heroic resistance to history by suggesting the ethical, aesthetic, and political costs of reading and writing in its denial. This book offers a rethinking of Nabokov's location in literary history, the ideological impulses which inform his fiction, and the importance of temporal aesthetics in negotiating the matrices of modernism.

Multicultural Writers from Antiquity to 1945 Alba Amoia, Bettina L. Knapp, 2001-10-30 The final decades of the 20th century have seen an explosion of interest in multiculturalism. But multiculturalism is more than an awareness of the different cultures comprising contemporary societies. For centuries, people from around the world have come in contact with cultures other than their own, and their exposure to multiple cultures has fostered their creativity and ability to make lasting contributions to civilization. The effects of multiculturalism are especially apparent in literature, since writers tend to be particularly aware of their environments and record their experiences. This reference includes alphabetically arranged entries for more than 100 world writers from antiquity to 1945 who were significantly influenced by cultures other than their own. Included are entries for major canonical Ancient and Modern writers of the Western and Eastern worlds. Each entry is written by an expert contributor and includes a brief biography, a discussion of multicultural themes and contexts, a summary of the writer's critical reception, and primary and secondary bibliographies. By illuminating the shaping influence of multiculturalism on these writers, the volume points to the lasting value of multiculturalism in the contemporary world Writers and Revolution Jonathan Beecher, 2021-04-01

The revolution of 1848 has been described as the revolution of the intellectuals In France the revolution galvanised the energies of major romantic writers and intellectuals This book follows nine writers through the revolution of 1848 and its aftermath Alphonse de Lamartine George Sand Marie d Agoult Victor Hugo Alexis de Tocqueville Pierre Joseph Proudhon Alexander Herzen Karl Marx and Gustave Flaubert Conveying a sense of the experience of 1848 as these writers lived it this fresh and engaging study captures the sense of possibility at a time when it was not yet clear that the Second French Republic had no future By looking closely at key texts in which each writer attempted to understand judge criticise or intervene in the revolution Jonathan Beecher shows how each endeavoured to answer the question posed explicitly by Tocqueville Why within the space of two generations did democratic revolutions twice culminate in the dictatorship of a Napoleon

The Historical Novel in Nineteenth-Century Europe Brian Hamnett,2011-11-24 Even at the height of its popularity in the early nineteenth century the historical novel faced criticism at many levels After its predominance in the 1810s and 1820s writers and historians shunned it as a travesty of their respective disciplines Even so the historical novel has frequently attracted a wide ranging public right up to the present day Brian Hamnett examines key novels by authors including Scott Balzac Manzoni Dickens Eliot Flaubert Fontane Gald's and Tolstoy revealing the contradictions inherent in this form of fiction and exposing the challenges writers faced in attempting to represent a reality that linked past and present He argues that the historical novel in the nineteenth century was a common European phenomenon with considerable interconnection of themes and periods Accordingly the book ranges from the British Isles and France through the Germanic territories Italy and Spain to the Russian Empire identifying the different objectives and phases of the historical novel Although historical novels did appear in the two previous centuries the form came to maturity in the nineteenth century a consequence of the developing nature of history as a discipline distinct from literature and philosophy and the increasing primacy of the novel for writers and the reading public Yet the frontiers between history and literature remained blurred and the two disciplines continued to influence one another as each sought a faithful representation of human experience

Narrative Memory in Flaubert's Works Christophe Ippolito,2001 Christophe Ippolito's study of Flaubert's fiction and travel narratives demonstrates how the Flaubertian reader's attitude is reoriented from a plot centered reading toward a retroactive reading based on the perception of underlying cultural signifiers It is argued that by strategically pointing to recurrent symbolic artifacts character types intertexts or tropes Flaubert's narratives shape a system of representation that is progressively memorized by the reader as a coherent hermeneutic model for the reception of his oeuvre
