

INTERPRETATION-HIGHER FORM OF ANALYSIS

- Collection of sources and combination of facts do not make history. The narrative must yield significant results.
- Therefore, the data so laboriously collected, collated, examined, scrutinized, grouped, arranged and elucidated are now subjected to a different kind of evaluation to bring out the relationship among the facts.
- It goes beyond the stage of description or narration and aims at higher form of analysis and synthesis.
- It's aim is to get as much as possible out of a particular account and to explain how, why and with what effect things happened and what their inter-relation was.
