Abstract

The aim of this paper is to propose a method for evaluating the teaching of entrepreneurship. Indeed, by studying the theory and international experience in the field of entrepreneurship education, we noticed the absence of a universal consensus on a clear and consistent evaluation method, which led us to propose a method based on three pillars namely: the fixed objectives to this teaching, the concerned public and the deployed pedagogy. It seems that this method is clear and easy to apply when compared to existing methods in theory.

Keywords: entrepreneurship, education, teaching, pedagogy, public

Introduction

The teaching of entrepreneurship is now a subject of debate on a large scale. It spreads in a spectacular way, to reach all branches and specialties, and gain all disciplines and universities of the whole world, in front of an economic and socio – politic environment in full storm. For one thing, 'entrepreneurship is considered to be a core competence for growth, employment and personal fulfillment' (EC, 2004, 2006 (in) Kailer (2009)).

Additionally, the teaching of entrepreneurship corresponds to all awareness-raising activities, training, and support of students' support (Fayolle, 2001). Its focus is 'to help students recognize business opportunities and act on these opportunities' (Jones and English, 2004 (in) Desai, Ding and Fodder (2010)).

The challenges of this teaching are various and of very diverse nature. They focus on the definition of new contributions from students, society and environment. Without ranking, we can evoke – in briefly- some of them:

- the raising awareness of the student to start a business through the development of entrepreneurship and entrepreneurial spirit;
- the acquisition of management skills needed; to launch a business, to take an existing company, and to develop a project;
- the development of social and relational skills to learn how to initiate a project, to lead a team, and to work in network, in the environment of business;
- the analysis of the main challenges of entrepreneurship and the presentation of all activities allowing entrepreneurs to surmount them.

Furthermore, Zahra and Wright (2011) suggested that "studying entrepreneurship in context can enrich our understanding of the dynamics of entrepreneurial activities as well as their manifestations".

Because of the diversity of approaches, the absence of definitive conclusions on this teaching, and its evaluation, otherwise a rather limited report, the authors are directed to two distinct pathways:

- is - it a separate discipline that should be taught within a specific training or an interdisciplinary subject which it is advisable to integrate into the classic trainings which already exist?
- the evaluation of this teaching can - it be made on the basis of qualitative criteria, difficult to measure or by the use of both quantitative and qualitative criteria, mostly non-operational?

But, few are the researches which were interested in the evaluation of the teaching of entrepreneurship. This article aims to meet this expectation. It is based on the following research question: how do we evaluate the success of the teaching of entrepreneurship?
