Faith, Health, and Healing in African American Life Stephanie Y. Mitchem, Emilie M. Townes, 2008-08-30 Black Americans are more likely than Whites to die of cancer and heart disease more likely to get diabetes and asthma and less likely to get preventive care and screening Some of this greater morbidity results from education income level and environment as well as access to health care But the traditional medical model does not always allow for a more holistic approach that takes into account the body the mind the spirit the family and the community This book offers a better understanding of the varieties of religiously based approaches to healing and alternative models of healing and health found in Black communities in the United States Contributors address the communal aspects of faith and health and explore the contexts in which individuals make choices about their health the roles that institutions play in shaping these decisions and the practices individuals engage in seeking better health or coping with the health they have By paying attention to the role of faith spirit and health this book offers a fuller sense of the varieties of ways Black health and health care are perceived and addressed from an inter religious perspective Community and religion based initiatives have emerged as one key way to address the health challenges found in the African American community In cities such as Atlanta Baltimore Dallas and Oakland residents organize exercise groups teach one another how to cook with healthy ingredients and encourage neighbors to get regular checkups Churches have become key sites for health education screening and testing Another set of responses to the challenge of Black health and healthcare in the United States comes from those who emphasize the body as a whole body mind soul and spirit often drawing on religious traditions such as Islam and African based religions such as Spiritism Santeria Vodun aka Voodoo Candomblé and others Understanding the issues and the various approaches is essential to combating the problems and this unique volume sheds light on areas often overlooked when considering the issues

Environmental Justice Paul Thompson, 2017-09-29 Environmental justice is one of the most controversial and important issues in contemporary social science Volume 8 of the Energy and Environmental Policy series challenges our understanding of environmental justice in a global context It includes theoretical investigations and case studies by leading authors in the field Global forces of technology and the development of global markets are transforming social life and the natural order These changes require a critical examination of nature society relations Increasingly modernization assigns the risks of modernity to those with the least power and greatest vulnerability to environmental harm Conventional environmentalism which focuses on critique of the effects of humanity against nature is inadequate to the challenges of globalization In particular it fails to explain sources of persistent patterns of social injustice that accompany escalating environmental exploitation As the capacity for environmental destruction expands broader concerns about environmental injustice have come to the fore including awareness of threats to whole cultures ways of life and entire ecologies The volume s authors consider the links between expanded patterns of environmental injustice and the structures and forces underlying and shaping the international political economy Environmental injustice is examined across a variety of cultures in the developed and developing world Through case studies of climate colonialism revolutionary ecology and environmental commodification the global and local dimensions of the problem are presented The latest volume in this important series demonstrates that environmental justice cannot be reduced to simple parables of indifference prejudice or appropriation It forges understanding of environmental injustice as a development of international political economy itself Likewise initiatives on behalf of environmental justice are seen as elements of broader movements to secure self determination in a globalizing world This book will be of interest to policymakers energy and environmental experts and all those interested in the environment and environmental law It provides new perspectives on the place of environmental justice in international political and economic conflict risks of modernity to those with the least power and greatest vulnerability to environmental harm Conventional environmentalism which focuses on critique of the effects of humanity against nature is inadequate to the challenges of globalization In particular it fails to explain sources of persistent patterns of social injustice that accompany escalating environmental exploitation As the capacity for environmental destruction expands broader concerns about environmental injustice have come to the fore including awareness of threats to whole cultures ways of life and entire ecologies The volume's authors consider the links between expanded patterns of environmental injustice and the structures and forces underlying and shaping the international political economy Environmental injustice is examined across a variety of cultures in the developed and developing world Through case studies of climate colonialism revolutionary ecology and environmental commodification the global and local dimensions of the problem are presented The latest volume in this important series demonstrates that environmental justice cannot be reduced to simple parables of indifference prejudice or appropriation It forges understanding of environmental injustice as a development of international political economy itself Likewise initiatives on behalf of environmental justice are seen as elements of broader movements to secure self-determination in a globalizing world This book will be of interest to policymakers energy and environmental experts and all those interested in the environment and environmental law It provides new perspectives on the place of environmental justice in international political and economic conflict John Byrne is director of the Center for Energy and Environmental Policy University of Delaware Leigh Glover is a research fellow at the same Center Cecilia Martinez is a professor of ethnic studies at the Metropolitan State University Minnesota and a research associate of the American Indian Research and Policy Institute
