Understanding Development Economics Adam Fforde, 2014-01-03 Important parts of development practice especially in key institutions such as the World Bank are dominated by economists In contrast Development Studies is largely based upon multidisciplinary work in which anthropologists human geographers sociologists and others play important roles Hence a tension has arisen between the claims made by Development Economics to be a scientific measurable discipline prone to wide usage of mathematical modelling and the more discursive practice based approach favoured by Development Studies The aim of this book is to show how the two disciplines have interacted as well as how they differ This is crucial in forming an understanding of development work and to thinking about why policy recommendations can often lead to severe and continuing problems in developing countries This book introduces Development Economics to those coming from two different but linked perspectives economists and students of development who are not economists In both explaining and critiquing Development Economics the book is able to suggest the implications of these findings for Development Studies and more broadly for development policy and its outcomes

Understanding Development Alessandro Minelli, 2021-05-20 Developmental biology is seemingly well understood with development widely accepted as being a series of programmed changes through which an egg turns into an adult organism or a seed matures into a plant However the picture is much more complex than that is it all genetically controlled or does environment have an influence Is the final adult stage the target of development and everything else just a build up to that point Are developmental strategies the same in plants as in animals How do we consider development in single celled organisms In this concise engaging volume Alessandro Minelli a leading developmental biologist addresses these key questions Using familiar examples and easy to follow arguments he offers fresh alternatives to a number of preconceptions and stereotypes awakening the reader to the disparity of developmental phenomena across all main branches of the tree of life

Understanding Development Ronald A. Mossler,Mary Ziegler,2016-03-17 Understanding Development: How Do Countries Develop ? David Lelashvili,2021-01-13 What is development Do the less developed countries of the world have any chance to become modern and developed What is the best path for a country to take towards development How do traditional societies evolve into more advanced societies of the type found in modern and developed countries The book attempts to answer all of these thought provoking questions I have been working in the sphere of international development for more than 15 years and have consulted different governments in Europe Asia and Africa on the development issues Each developing country in which I have worked is different and unique yet they share a significant number of common features peculiar to developing counties I want to emphasize one of them pessimism towards the prospects of country s development I came across this in my experiences in the low and middle income group countries whereby civil servants or the general population of those countries were very pessimistic of their respective country s development prospects One of the biggest drivers for this pessimism was limited knowledge with regards to two particular questions what is development and how do countries develop generally This issue is complicated by the fact that one needs some basic level knowledge of several interconnected disciplines to adequately answer these development field questions such as economics political science sociology geography demographics etc As a matter of fact the majority of books in the development field concentrate only on one or a few disciplines to provide viewpoints in development There are also many schools of thought and conventions regarding which are the exact features constituting the development of a country and thus what should be the development priorities This book tries to be innovative and daring to target all of these It observes development from different viewpoints of various disciplines and discusses all major theories of development It tries to attract the interest of readers from as many different academic backgrounds as possible For this reason simple language is used to the extent possible and complex social sciences terminologies are largely avoided For the terminology that is used explanations are provided either in the text or in footnotes The book contains some real stories from development practice with some selected cases from different development consultancy assignments The book discusses case studies of remarkable examples in the development history such as those of Singapore and Ireland contemporary actual topics such as globalization and development modern global changes and their influence on development The case study of Singapore can be used for generating ideas how to implement policies and build institutions in the developing countries context The most important factor in Singapore's success as acknowledged by many scientists was skillfully designed public policies All major successful public policies are analyzed in the book along with institutions progress in the country Ireland's success 1995-2007 Celtic Tiger period has been universally acknowledged The book discusses the most important messages from the successful development case of Ireland to the developing World Finally different levels of development of nations differences of value systems different cultures and beliefs are suggested to create a diversity the thrilling diversity of the World

Understanding Development John Rapley, 2006 Rapley traces the evolution of development theory from its strong statist orientation in the early postwar period through the neoclassical phase to the middle of the road position of the present day drawing attention to the inadequacy of existing models Using a wide range of examples he shows where how and why various approaches to development have worked or failed He concludes with a look at one of the most disturbing subjects theorists and practitioners alike must tackle why development appears to be so far out of reach for so many poor countries

Genes in Development Eva M. Neumann-Held, Christoph Rehmann-Sutter, 2006 In light of scientific advances such as genomics predictive diagnostics genetically engineered agriculture nuclear transfer cloning and the manipulation of stem cells the idea that genes carry predetermined molecular programs or blueprints is pervasive Yet new scientific discoveries such as rna transcripts of single genes that can lead to the production of different compounds from the same pieces of dna challenge the concept of the gene alone as the dominant factor in biological development Increasingly aware of the tension between certain empirical results and interpretations of those results based on the orthodox view of genetic determinism a growing number of scientists urge a rethinking of what a gene is and how it works In this collection a group of internationally renowned scientists present some prominent alternative approaches to understanding the role of dna in the construction and function of biological organisms Contributors discuss alternatives to the programmatic view of dna including the developmental systems approach methodical culturalism the molecular process concept of the gene the hermeneutic theory of description and process structuralist biology None of the approaches cast doubt on the notion that dna is tremendously important to biological life on earth rather contributors examine different ideas of how dna should be represented evaluated and explained Just as ideas about genetic codes have reached far beyond the realm of science the reconceptualizations of genetic theory in this volume have broad implications for ethics philosophy and the social sciences Contributors Thomas B rglin Brian C Goodwin James Griesemer Paul Griffiths Jesper Hoffmeyer Evelyn Fox Keller Gerd B M ller Eva M Neumann Held Stuart A Newman Susan Oyama Christoph Rehmann Sutter Sahotra Sarkar Jackie Leach Scully Gerry Webster Ulrich Wolf
