Wounded Planet:

Wounded Planet Kelly-Mahaffey, 2021-01-05 Wounded Planet the principal story of this new science fiction anthology is one of a planet that has suffered a catastrophic collision with another celestial body which has shifted its center of gravity from the vertical to as much as 13 degrees in some latitudes A recessive adaptive mutation has occurred in some of the sentient beings of the planet which allows them to fly a significant advantage over those who can only walk Nevertheless encumbered by their wings the Flyers are helpless to resist the oppression of the Walkers who enslave and revile them This is the story of the strongest most honorable and adventurous of the Flyers and his quest to free himself and his people from the Walkers The story is one of love betrayal salvation and a brave exploration of the unknown As the narrative unfolds the deepest and more familiar regions of the human psyche are plumbed These stories in this anthology range from the distant past to a near future and beyond our world Wounded Planet Jean Varda, 1980 The Wounded Planet Roger Elwood, Virginia Kidd, 1974 Wounded Planet Henk A.M.J. ten Have, 2019-05-14 Exploring the interconnectedness of human health biodiversity and bioethics We all depend on environmental biodiversity for clean air safe water adequate nutrition effective drugs and protection from infectious diseases Today s healthcare experts and policymakers are keenly aware that biodiversity is one of the crucial determinants of health not only for individuals but also for the human population of the planet Unfortunately rapid globalization and ongoing environmental degradation mean that biodiversity is rapidly deteriorating threatening planetary health on a mass scale In Wounded Planet Henk A M J ten Have argues that the ethical debate about healthcare has become too narrow and individualized We must he writes adopt a new bioethical discourse one that deals with issues of justice equality vulnerability human rights and solidarity in order to adequately reflect the serious threat that current loss of biodiversity poses to planetary health Exploring modern environmental challenges in depth ten Have persuasively demonstrates that environmental concerns can no longer be separated from healthcare challenges and thus should be included in global bioethics Going beyond an individualized perspective he poses audacious questions What does it mean that patients are poor or uninsured and cannot afford suggested medicines How can we deal with the air and water pollution that are producing a patient s illness How do we respond to patients complaining about the safety and quality of drinking water in their neighborhood Touching on infectious and noncommunicable diseases as well as food medicine and water Wounded Planet transcends the limited vision of mainstream bioethics to compassionately reveal how healthcare and medicine must take a broad perspective that includes the social and environmental conditions in which individuals live

Curating with Care Elke Krasny, Lara Perry, 2023-03-15 This book presents over 20 authors reflections on curating care and presents a call to give curatorial attention to the primacy of care for all life and for more caring curating that responds to the social ecological and political analysis of curatorial caregiving Social and ecological struggles for a different planetary culture based on care and respect for the dignity of life are reflected in contemporary curatorial practices that explore human and non human interdependence The prevalence of themes of care in curating is a response to a dual crisis the crisis of social and ecological care that characterizes global politics and the professional crisis of curating under the pressures of the increasingly commercialized cultural landscape Foregrounding that all beings depend on each other for life and survival this book collects theoretical essays methodological challenges and case studies from curators working in different global geographies to explore the range of ways in which curatorial labour is rendered as care Practising curators activists and theorists situate curatorial labour in the context of today s general care crisis This volume answers to the call to more fully understand how their transformative work allows for imagining the future of bodily social and environmental care and the ethics of interdependency differently

Letters from a Wounded Planet Bilidag K Ardent, 2026-02-02 Letters from a Wounded Planet A Chorus of Voices from a World Still Breathing is not a book that shouts It does not argue accuse or overwhelm the reader with statistics or charts Instead it speaks quietly and deliberately trusting that truth does not need volume to be heard It speaks through emotion memory and witness rather than instruction and most importantly it speaks in the voices we have learned to ignore In these pages a river writes after it has been dammed too many times A forest writes after a firestorm has passed A child writes while drinking brown water and asking questions adults no longer know how to answer An insect writes from a spring that never arrived and a glacier writes as it leaves cracking away from the world it once anchored The air writes during rush hour heavy with exhaust and impatience The soil writes after years of chemical feeding stripped of its living breath The ocean writes carrying oil plastic waste and silence across its warming surface Each voice is distinct yet together they form a shared testimony of loss endurance and warning This book is a collection of lyrical deeply human letters written from nature itself and from those who suffer most quietly when nature is wounded Each letter is an intimate address a confession a lament a fragment of memory or a fragile offering of hope These are not abstract reflections but direct encounters written to collapse the distance between reader and world This book does not claim the planet is dying It tells the harder truth the planet is wounded and still alive Scarred but breathing damaged yet resisting erasure life persists not because the harm is small but because resilience runs deep Survival here is not denial it is defiance Most environmental books speak about the world This one allows the world to speak for itself Climate change is no longer an abstract future It becomes a bird that can no longer hear its own song over traffic coral turning white beneath warming seas a farmer trapped between fire and flood and a child breathing smoke while asking why Each letter is written in the first person You are not observing loss you are being addressed by it The voices do not ask for pity but for presence The book unfolds as a sequence of standalone letters that echo one another forming a chorus of grief layered with resilience You will hear from land water air creatures people systems and finally the planet itself not as a god or judge but as a living body marked by use and misuse This book allows grief to exist fully It mourns lost habitats extinct species rivers that burned and skies without stars Yet it does not surrender to despair Beneath the damage something still stirs a seed still tries a forest grows back slowly and hope remains quiet stubborn and earned We live in an age of distance between cause and consequence comfort and collapse Letters from a Wounded Planet shortens that distance It asks the reader to feel not to be shamed but to be reconnected It reminds us that air has no borders water remembers everything soil is alive and even silence can be destroyed You do not need to be an activist to enter these pages You do not need answers You only need to listen The book closes with an invitation rather than a command Nature does not ask for miracles it asks for attention The final words do not end the story they leave it open I am wounded but I am not finished
