Modern Observational Physical Oceanography Carl Wunsch,2015-05-04 The essential introduction to modern physical oceanography With the advent of computers novel instruments satellite technology and increasingly powerful modeling tools we know more about the ocean than ever before Yet we also have a new generation of oceanographers who have become increasingly distanced from the object of their study Ever fewer scientists collect the observational data on which they base their research Instead many download information without always fully understanding how far removed it is from the original data with opportunity for great misinterpretation This textbook introduces modern physical oceanography to beginning graduate students in marine sciences and experienced practitioners in allied fields Real observations are strongly emphasized as are their implications for understanding the behavior of the global ocean Written by a leading physical oceanographer Modern Observational Physical Oceanography explains what the observational revolution of the past twenty five years has taught us about the real changing fluid ocean Unlike any other book it provides a broad and accessible treatment of the subject covering everything from modern methods of observation and data analysis to the fluid dynamics and modeling of ocean processes and variability Fully illustrated in color throughout the book describes the fundamental concepts that are needed before delving into more advanced topics including internal inertial waves tides balanced motions and large scale circulation physics Provides an accessible introduction to modern physical oceanography Written by a leading physical oceanographer Emphasizes real observations of the fluid ocean Features hundreds of color illustrations An online illustration package is available to professors Ocean Research for Understanding Climatic Variations, 1983 Report prepared to start a dialogue among ocean scientists on the steps that must be taken in order to advance significantly our understanding of the role that oceans play in climatic variation and to identify ocean research needed in the context of the developing national U S and international climate research plans Investigating the oceans Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Science and Technology Committee, 2007-10-18 Ocean processes are fundamental to climate and weather patterns across the world they provide minerals foods and chemicals as well as being major energy resources both hydrocarbons and renewables Oceans also provide services in the form of transport trade communications and recreation as well as services through the maintenance of biological and landscape diversity the importance of which may only be fully appreciated by future generations For all these reasons the Committee s report finds that despite the impressive research efforts of UK institutions and individual scientists oceans need to be monitored and studied more thoroughly than has been the case up to now with better co ordination of activities and increased overall levels of funding The Committee s central recommendation is that there should be a new marine science agency replacing the current inter agency co ordinating committee with a remit to co ordinate marine science throughout the UK promoting marine science education in schools universities and to the wider public Overall responsibility for the UK s marine science strategy should be invested in a designated minister within Defra The new agency should undertake a strategy to tackle skills shortages in marine science and technology engaging with industry and facilitating UK involvement in international organisations as well as co ordinating ocean monitoring and observations Another key task will be to ensure the balance of research effort between the different strands within marine science and between the crucial polar regions with a greater focus in the Arctic albeit not at the expense of the work conducted by the British Antarctic Survey Concerns are raised over the research vessel capacity available to UK scientists provided by NERC especially for coastal research and with regards to the adequacy of Defra s plans to establish marine protected areas under the forthcoming marine bill 50 Years of Ocean
