Unifying Concepts Of Leukemia:

Unifying Concepts of Leukemia Ray M. Dutcher, L. Chieco-Bianchi, International symposium on comparative leukemia research, 1973 The Immunopathology of Lymphoreticular Neoplasms J. Twomey, 2012-12-06 Until recently understanding of the lymphomas was limited and largely descriptive Attention has been focused for the most part upon morphological issues and clinical matters Although useful this approach has many shortcomings The true cytoidentity of primary neoplastic cells was not established by these methods nor could their clonal nature be recognized The more overt changes in immunological function such as monoclonal gammopathies and immunodeficiencies were appreciated as important components of these diseases However subtle immunological perturbations were not recognized Furthermore associations were not established between the lymphoreticular neoplasms on the one hand and both primary and secondary immunological abnormalities on the other There has been considerable recent progress in the fields of immunobiology cytology and immunochemistry These new approaches have proved readily applicable to studies on the lymphomas The term lymphoma has been applied to a heterogeneous group of neoplasms that involve lymphoid tissues This term is not altogether satisfactory since it implies that cells of primarily the lymphoid series are involved in the neoplastic process Some neoplasms heretofore classified as lymphomas now appear from the results of penetrating analysis using newer methodology to be malignancies of the macrophage series rather than of the lymphocytic series These neoplasms include Hodgkin's disease and a minority of neoplasms previously referred to as histiocytic lymphomas The majority of these histiocytic lymphomas are now known to be lymphoid malignancies involving the B cell series Etiology National Cancer Institute (U.S.), 1972 Unifying Concepts of Leukemia Ray M. Symposium on Comparative Leukemia Research, Padova/Venice, Italy, 1971. Unifying concepts of leukemia, 1973 Fast Facts: Treatment-Free Remission in Chronic Myeloid Leukemia Sandeep, Potluri, 2021-01-26 The tyrosine kinase inhibitor TKI imatinib was the first treatment to specifically target cancer cells rather than the relatively indiscriminate effects of conventional chemotherapy on any rapidly dividing cells This concept of targeted treatment in cancer is one of the important advances in modern medicine in the last 30 years Indeed treatment with TKIs has transformed chronic myeloid leukemia CML from a cancer with a poor prognosis to one in which many patients can expect a normal lifespan Success with the TKIs has prompted the question of whether it is desirable or feasible for patients to remain on treatment for long periods While the TKIs are targeted they are associated with considerable toxicity and long term treatment has important economic implications for health services and patients Thus the concept of treatment free remission TFR has emerged for patients in deep clinical remission Clinical research over the last decade has focused on whether treatment can be stopped how to best monitor patients while off treatment and how to intervene before a clinical relapse As this research progresses the tantalizing prospect of a cure for some patients seems increasingly feasible This new Fast Facts title outlines this trail blazing approach to the long term management of patients living with CML in remission It explains the concepts of molecular and hematologic relapse the highly sensitive technologies that allow disease monitoring and how TFR is best managed in practice It is a concise educational resource ideal for any healthcare professional involved in the treatment of patients with CML who wants to understand TFR particularly clinical nurse specialists and pharmacists who increasingly help clinicians to run CML clinics

Acute Myelogenous Leukemia Judith E. Karp,2009-11-29 Acute Myelogenous Leukemia is a timely compilation of new concepts in the molecular pathogenesis and molecular therapy of acute myelogenous leukemia AML The focus is on selected critical molecular determinants of AML pathogenesis and pathophysiology and the exploitation of these factors by diverse therapeutic agents and modalities Bringing together new concepts and findings in the basic and clinical science of AML the book emphasizes the molecular basis for new therapies that stand to have the greatest potential impact on the clinical face of these diseases The text provides insights into selected novel strategies currently and prospectively being developed including interruption of specific signal transduction pathways modulation of gene expression attempts to reinstate differentiation and immunomodulation There is an emphasis throughout on the bidirectional flow of knowledge between the clinical and laboratory arenas and both basic and clinical scientists will benefit from this translational text
