

Understanding Diabetes

What is Diabetes?

Diabetes is a group of metabolic diseases characterized by a chronic disturbance in the blood glucose levels. In diabetes, the body does not produce enough insulin or the insulin it produces does not work properly. Insulin helps the body use glucose for energy and to store extra glucose for later use.

Types of Diabetes

There are three main types of diabetes: Type 1, Type 2, and Gestational Diabetes. Type 1 is an autoimmune disease where the body's immune system attacks the insulin-producing cells in the pancreas. Type 2 is a lifestyle-related disease where the body becomes resistant to insulin or does not produce enough. Gestational Diabetes occurs during pregnancy.

What is Insulin?

Insulin is a hormone produced by the pancreas that helps the body use glucose. It allows the glucose to enter the cells and be used for energy. Without insulin, glucose cannot enter the cells and the body cannot use it for energy.

The liver takes up glucose, converts it into glycogen and stores it.

Glucose signals the liver to convert glycogen to glucose and release the glucose into the blood.

The conversion of glycogen into glucose is called gluconeogenesis and takes up half of the glucose in the blood.

Type 1 Diabetes: In this condition, the body does not produce enough insulin. This is an autoimmune disease where the body's immune system attacks the insulin-producing cells in the pancreas. The body does not produce enough insulin to use the glucose for energy. This leads to high blood sugar levels.

Type 2 Diabetes: In this condition, the body does not use insulin properly. This is a lifestyle-related disease where the body becomes resistant to insulin or does not produce enough. This leads to high blood sugar levels. Type 2 diabetes is often associated with obesity and a sedentary lifestyle.

What is Glucose?

Glucose is a type of sugar and is the body's main source of energy. It is produced in the liver from carbohydrates and stored in the liver and muscles. It is used by the body for energy and to build and repair tissues.

Glucose Metabolism

Cells use glucose as fuel

Muscle takes up glucose, either using it as fuel or storing it as glycogen

Glucose is converted to triglycerides and stored in fat (adipose tissue)
