Classroom Activities for 'A' Level Computing I.S. Flynn,2004-07-15 Some seventy classroom activities designed to add variety and interest to A level Computing courses with a strong emphasis on student involvement and active learning Students are encouraged to process information rather than just reproduce it Most activities involve small group work Some provide useful ways of starting a lesson or reviewing it while others extend knowledge or add variety to revision sessions A few use software that can be downloaded from the web site The exercises may be photocopied and distributed to students or loaded onto an intranet Full instructions are given for running each type of activity and answers are provided wherever appropriate

Uncertainty in Multi-Source Databases Premchand S. Nair,2012-11-06 Database and database systems have become an essential part of everyday life such as in banking activities online shopping or reservations of airline tickets and hotels These trends place more demands on the capabilities of future database systems which need to evolve into decision making systems based on data from multiple sources with varying reliability In this book a model for the next generation of database systems is presented It is demonstrated how to quantize favorable and unfavorable qualitative facts so that they can be stored and processed efficiently as well as how to use the reliability of the contributing sources in our decision makings The concept of a confidence index set ciset is introduced in order to mathematically model the above issues A simple introduction to relational database systems is given allowing anyone with no background in database theory to appreciate the further contents of this work especially the extended relational operations and semantics of the ciset relational database model
