Minor Knowledge and Microhistory Sigurdur Gylfi Magnusson, David Olafsson, 2016-10-04 This book studies everyday writing practices among ordinary people in a poor rural society in the 19th and early 20th centuries Using the abundance of handwritten material produced disseminated and consumed some centuries after the advent of print as its research material the book s focus is on its day to day usage and on minor knowledge i e text matter originating and rooted primarily in the everyday life of the peasantry The focus is on the history of education and communication in a global perspective Rather than engaging in comparing different countries or regions the authors seek to view and study early modern and modern manuscript culture as a transnational or transregional practice giving agency to its ordinary participants and attention to hitherto overlooked source material Through a microhistorical lens the authors examine the strength of this aspect of popular culture and try to show it in a wider perspective as well as asking questions about the importance of this development for the continuity of the literary tradition The book is an attempt to explain the nature of the literary culture in general how new ideas were transported from one person to another from community to community and between regions essentially the role of minor knowledge in the development of modern men
