- Ensure you have had a conversation with the class teacher or school that you are inheriting your pupils from. This can be really helpful to highlight specific needs, identify those who need interventions and also share other information about the children or their families that may have an impact on their school life.
- Have high expectations of your class from the start of the year. Set out clear rules and systems from day one so that children know how to behave in the classroom. Write a class contract together, get each child to sign it and display it in your classroom.
- Starting year 3 can feel overwhelming for many children, particularly if they have moved from an infant to a junior school, so prepare for a few tears in the first week or two. Parents will be worried if they see their child entering school each day in tears, so letting them know that their child is fine once they are in the classroom will help reassure them.
- If you have any particularly anxious children, preparing a job to do in class as they enter the classroom (such as collecting the register or ransacking out books) can help distract them from their worries.
- Your new pupils may initially come to you if a problem arises. Ensure you are available to listen to any concerns they have and support them to solve the problem themselves. It is also helpful to have their parents and family on the phone for the first few weeks.
- Make sure you follow your school's behaviour code for rewards and sanctions. Be consistent in how you use it, and it will help your new pupils understand what is expected of them.
- Use reward booklets, house points and other systems - children love to see their progress.
- A class timetable displayed in the form of the class's usual list of activities is useful as it makes it easier for the day to unfold.

Science in Primary Schools: Examining the Practices of Effective Teachers Angela Fitzgerald, 2012-10-19 If the status and quality of science education in schools is to improve efforts need to be made to better understand the classroom practices of effective science teachers Teachers are key players in a re imagining of science education This book explores how two primary school teachers identified as effective practitioners approached science teaching and learning over a unit of work In recording the teaching and learning experiences in their classrooms the author highlights how the two teachers adopted different approaches drawing on their particular beliefs and knowledge to support student learning in science in ways that were appropriate to their contexts as well as reflected their different experiences strengths and backgrounds Through sharing their stories this book illustrates that due to the complex nature of teaching and learning there is no one way of defining effectiveness In documenting this research it is hoped that other teachers and teacher educators will be inspired to think about primary school science education in innovative ways

Styles of Practice in Higher Education Carol Evans, Maria Kozhevnikov, 2016-04-08 This book highlights important discussions occurring within the styles field that have direct relevance for the development of effective twenty first century learning environments Styles research in this context is used as an umbrella term to encompass cognitive styles learning styles and approaches to learning as well as student and teacher beliefs and conceptions of learning and teaching Styles have the capacity to influence instruction in the ways that an educator chooses to design and deliver the curriculum However the potential of styles to inform teaching and learning and vice versa remains under explored Furthermore the frequent misuse and misinterpretation of styles has led to over simplistic assumptions and practices including the labelling of learners as one style or another and the focus on matching mode of instruction to style of learner A fundamental challenge therefore remains the dissemination of clear guidance on the effective ways of using styles research in practice this is the core aim of the Education Learning Styles Individual differences Network whose members have contributed chapters to this book The volume provides a major contribution to the knowledge base on enhancing the application of styles research to practice within both educational and workplace settings and is of considerable value to those involved in the design and delivery of effective learning environments within higher education Relationships between styles variables and other individual learning differences are considered across a range of subject domains medicine science teacher education and cultural contexts The key themes discussed include the potential of constructivist environments to effect change in learning behaviours the notion of deep approaches to learning relationships between approaches to learning and self regulated learning the varied learning and teaching responses of students teachers to specific constructivist interventions including the identification of specific patterns of responses that are characteristic of highlighted groups relationships between conceptions and approaches to learning and teaching This book was originally published as a special issue of Research Papers in Education Quality Research in Literacy and Science Education Mack C. Shelley, Larry D. Yore, Brian B. Hand, 2008-12-30 Statistical models attempt to describe and quantify relationships between variables In the models presented in this chapter there is a response variable sometimes called dependent variable and at least one predictor variable sometimes called independent or explanatory variable When investigating a possible cause and effect type of relationship the response variable is the putative effect and the predictors are the hypothesized causes Typically there is a main predictor variable of interest other predictors in the model are called covariates Unknown covariates or other independent variables not controlled in an experiment or analysis can affect the dependent or outcome variable and mislead the conclusions made from the inquiry Bock Velleman given the model  $p$  is the probability that a relationship is seen by mere chance The smaller the  $p$  value the more confident we can be that the pattern seen in the data is not random In the type of models examined here the  $R$  measures the proportion of the variation in the response variable that is explained by the predictors specified in the model if  $R$  is close to 1 then almost all the variation in the response variable has been explained This measure is also known as the multiple correlation coefficient Statistical studies can be grouped into two types experimental and observational Resources in Education, 1979 Statistics of Public Education in England and Wales Great Britain.
