The Science of Well-Being Ed Diener, 2009-07-16 Major Theoretical Questions Theories about subjective well being have grown over the past several decades but have been refined only slowly as adequate data have been compiled to test them We can characterize the theories describing happiness along several dimensions The first dimension is whether the theory places the locus of happiness in external conditions such as income and status as many sociological theories do or within the attitudes and temperament of the individual as many psychological theories do Some have maintained that people adapt to all circumstances over time so that only individual personality matters for producing happiness whereas others believe that economic and other societal factors are the dominant forces in producing well being Throughout my writings there is a mix of both the internal and external factors that influence well being A second dimension that characterizes scholarship on well being is the issue of whether the factors affecting well being are relative or absolute That is are there standards used by people at all times and places in judging their lives and in reacting to events Or are standards dependent on what other people possess on expectations and on adaptation levels based on past circumstances Again there is evidence supporting the role of both universal and relative standards People around the globe are probably influenced by common factors such as friendship versus loneliness but even these universal influences on happiness are probably subject to some degree of comparison depending on what the person is used to and what others have However some factors might be much more comparative than others as Hsee Yang Li and Shen in press have described
