

The Vascular System

What is the vascular system?

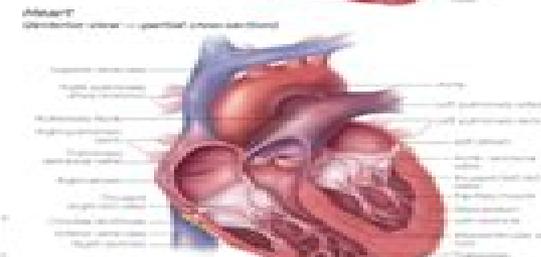

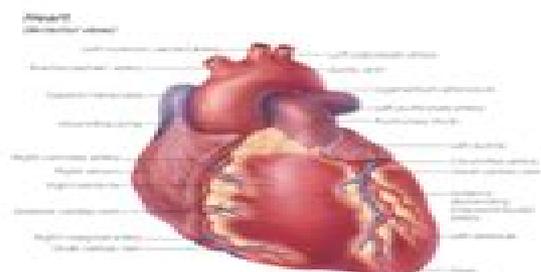

The vascular system is a network of blood vessels that transport blood throughout the body. It consists of the heart, arteries, veins, and capillaries. The system is responsible for delivering oxygen and nutrients to cells and removing waste products.

Molecular system circulations

Artery	100 micrometers
Vein	100 micrometers
Capillary	5-10 micrometers

The heart

The heart is a muscular organ that pumps blood throughout the body. It consists of four chambers: the right and left atria and ventricles. The heart is located in the chest cavity, between the lungs.

Typical artery (cross-section)

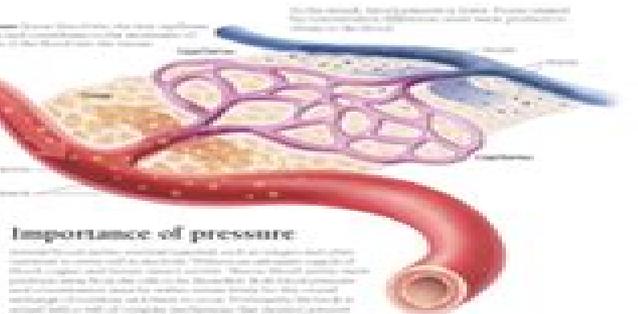

Typical vein (cross-section)

Blood vessels

Blood vessels are the network of tubes that carry blood throughout the body. They are divided into arteries, veins, and capillaries. Arteries carry oxygenated blood away from the heart, while veins carry deoxygenated blood back to the heart. Capillaries are the smallest vessels and are where the exchange of oxygen and nutrients occurs.

Importance of pressure

Pressure is essential for the flow of blood through the vascular system. The heart creates the pressure that drives blood through the arteries. The pressure drops as blood moves through the capillaries and is then restored as it moves through the veins back to the heart.

Arterial valve (aortic)

Arterial valves are located in the arteries and prevent the backflow of blood. They are typically found in the aorta and pulmonary artery.
