The Moral Purpose of the State Christian Reus-Smit, 2009-11-02 This book seeks to explain why different systems of sovereign states have built different types of fundamental institutions to govern interstate relations Why for example did the ancient Greeks operate a successful system of third party arbitration while international society today rests on a combination of international law and multilateral diplomacy Why did the city states of Renaissance Italy develop a system of oratorical diplomacy while the states of absolutist Europe relied on naturalist international law and old diplomacy Conventional explanations of basic institutional practices have difficulty accounting for such variation Christian Reus Smit addresses this problem by presenting an alternative constructivist theory of international institutional development one that emphasizes the relationship between the social identity of the state and the nature and origin of basic institutional practices Reus Smit argues that international societies are shaped by deep constitutional structures that are based on prevailing beliefs about the moral purpose of the state the organizing principle of sovereignty and the norm of procedural justice These structures inform the imaginations of institutional architects as they develop and adjust institutional arrangements between states As he shows with detailed reference to ancient Greece Renaissance Italy absolutist Europe and the modern world different cultural and historical contexts lead to profoundly different constitutional structures and institutional practices The first major study of its kind this book is a significant addition to our theoretical and empirical understanding of international relations past and present

Diplomacy in the 21st Century Paul Sharp, 2019-05-02 This book provides an introduction to the theory and practice of diplomacy and its vital role in an era of increasing international uncertainty The work employs a distinctive diplomatic perspective on international relations and argues that the experience of conducting diplomacy gives rise to a set of priorities first the peaceful resolution of disputes second the avoidance of unwanted conflict and third the minimization of the intensity of violent conflict where it has become unavoidable It argues that changes in the international system require a shift in priorities from the diplomacy of problem solving by building institutionalized cooperation to the diplomacy of managing relationships between people Divided into three sections the first examines what is meant when we talk about diplomacy why we need diplomats and the operations of the modern diplomatic system of states The second discusses the three bads about which people generally worry bad leaders bad media and bad followers The idea of bad is considered in terms of the moral character professional competence and the consequences of what people do for us The final section discusses diplomacy and bad diplomats reviewing what people can do to help themselves and the professionals be good diplomats This book is intended as a primary text for courses in international diplomacy and as a supplementary text for courses on contemporary issues in international relations

Diplomacy Christer Jönsson, Richard Langhorne, 2004 The study of diplomacy in many respects the engine room of international relations has been marked by a revitalisation in recent years This brings together the seminal writings in the field to provide a unique reference work on this essential institution for the conduct of international affairs
