Research Progress in Alzheimer's Disease and Dementia Miao-Kun Sun, 2007 Alzheimer s disease AD is the most common type of neurodegenerative disorder in the ageing population with dementia as a common consequence AD is defined pathologically by the appearance of extracellular senile plaques and intracellular neurofibrillary tangles as described by Alois Alzheimer about a century ago The causes for AD include genetic predisposition in a small population ageing and environmental stresses in majority cases The underlying pathogenic cascades increases in expression of amyloid precursor protein and accumulation of A and reactive oxidant activity and inflammation have the features of both adaptive at least initially and harmful when becoming excessive Dementia on the other hand is a clinical diagnosis and is defined as globally persistently impaired cognitive skills including memory Alzheimer dementia refers to clinical dementia in patients who also have Alzheimer neuropathology Alzheimer dementia is what brings the patients to seek medical treatments An extraordinary inability to form new memory especially of those episodic type and executive dysfunction are among the earliest symptoms in AD patients In end stage AD cognitive degeneration extends far beyond memory loss The underlying causes include decreases in impaired brain metabolism which results in impaired synaptic functions and capacities thus impaired information processing and eventually leads to neuronal injury and death This book presents leading edge research in this dynamic field

How and Why Does Spatial-Hearing Ability Differ among Listeners? What Is the Role of Learning and Multisensory Interactions? Guillaume Andéol, Brian D. Simpson, Ewan A. Macpherson, 2016-08-29 Spatial hearing ability has been found to vary widely across listeners A survey of the existing auditory space perception literature suggests that three main types of factors may account for this variability physical factors e.g. acoustical characteristics related to sound localization cues perceptual factors e.g. sensory cognitive processing perceptual learning multisensory interactions and methodological factors e.g. differences in stimulus presentation methods across studies However the extent to which these and perhaps other still unidentified factors actually contribute to the observed variability in spatial hearing across individuals with normal hearing or within special populations e.g. hearing impaired listeners remains largely unknown Likewise the role of perceptual learning and multisensory interactions in the emergence of a multimodal but unified representation of auditory space is still an active topic of research A better characterization and understanding of the determinants of inter individual variability in spatial hearing and of its relationship with perceptual learning and multisensory interactions would have numerous benefits In particular it would enhance the design of rehabilitative devices and of human machine interfaces involving auditory or multimodal space perception such as virtual auditory multimodal displays in aeronautics or navigational aids for the visually impaired For this Research Topic we have considered manuscripts that present new methods or review existing methods for the study of inter individual differences present new data or review existing data concerning acoustical features relevant for explaining inter individual differences in sound localization performance present new or review existing psychophysical or neurophysiological findings concerning spatial hearing and or auditory perceptual learning and or multisensory interactions in humans normal or impaired young or older listeners or other species discuss the influence of inter individual differences on the design and use of assistive listening devices rehabilitation or human machine interfaces involving spatial hearing or multimodal perception of space ergonomics
