Trained To Intrude:

Understanding Intrusion Detection through Visualization Stefan Axelsson, David Sands, 2006-06-01 This monograph is the outgrowth of Stefan Axelsson's PhD Dissertation at Chalmers University in Göteborg Sweden. The dissertation in turn collects a number of research efforts performed over a period of six years or so into a coherent whole. It was my honor to serve as the opponent at Dr Axelsson's examination. In the Swedish system it is the job of the opponent to place the candidate's work into a broader perspective demonstrating its significance and contributions to the field and then to introduce the work to the attendees at the examination. This done the candidate presents the technical details of the work and the opponent critiques the work giving the candidate the opportunity to defend it. This forward is adapted from the introduction that I gave at the examination and should serve to acquaint the reader not only with the work at hand but also with the field to which it applies. The title of the work Understanding Intrusion Detection Through Visualization is particularly telling. As is the case with any good piece of research we hope to gain an understanding of a problem not just a recipe or simple solution of immediate but limited utility. For much of its formative period computer security concentrated on developing systems that in effect embodied a fortress model of protection.

Computational Science and Its Applications -- ICCSA 2004 Antonio Laganà, Marina L. Gavrilova, Vipin Kumar, Youngsong Mun, C.J. Kenneth Tan, Osvaldo Gervasi, 2004-04-26 The natural mission of Computational Science is to tackle all sorts of human problems and to work out intelligent automata aimed at alleviating the burden of working out suitable tools for solving complex problems. For this reason Computational Science though originating from the need to solve the most challenging problems in science and engineering computational science is the key player in the fight to gain fundamental advances in astronomy, biology, chemistry, environmental science, physics and several other scientific and engineering disciplines. It is increasingly turning its attention to all fields of human activity. In all activities in fact intensive computation, information handling, knowledge synthesis, the use of ad hoc devices etc increasingly need to be exploited and coordinated regardless of the location of both the users and the various and heterogeneous computing platforms. As a result the key to understanding the explosive growth of this discipline lies in two adjectives that more and more appropriately refer to Computational Science and its applications: interoperable and ubiquitous. Numerous examples of ubiquitous and interoperable tools and applications are given in the present four LNCS volumes containing the contributions delivered at the 2004 International Conference
