DANIEL G. SAUNDERS

THE ASSESSMENT of domestic abuse presents many challenges to the practitioner. Abuse takes a wide variety of forms and both the victim and offender are often reluctant to share information. Offenders typically try to minimize the extent of abuse out of shame and fear of punishment. Victims, who are sometimes blamed for their victimization, also may feel shame. They may be reluctant to talk about the abuse because they fear retaliation, have a sense of loyalty to the abuser, or want to avoid painful memories.

Assessment in this area is challenging for other reasons as well. There are complex legal issues with which the practitioner must be familiar, such as providing information for child custody decisions or determining when signs of dangerousness require warning a potential victim. Most assessment tools in the family violence field are not well developed. Some commonly used measures of family violence have been criticized for their inadequacies.

This chapter describes multiple methods for assessing the presence of domestic violence as well as its risk factors and aftereffects. The application of these assessment methods to legal cases is described, followed by a case example to illustrate the evaluation of an actual court case. The chapter focuses primarily on physical abuse.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROBLEM

The view of the family as "a haven in a heartless world" has been tempered in recent years by the knowledge that all too often it is a place of great cruelty. Domestic violence affects over two million marriages in the United States every year and a comparably high rate of dating and cohabiting couples (Levy, 1991; Plichta, 1996; Straus & Gelles, 1990). Violence frequently continues after separation (Tjaden & Thoennes, 1998). The violence can range from a few slaps to threats with lethal weapons. Its frequency can range from a single occurrence to weekly. Even minor violence must be the focus of concern because it sometimes escalates to severe violence, and in itself can change the power dynamics of the relationship.
