Understanding The North Sea System:

Understanding the North Sea System H. Charnock, K.R. Dyer, J.M. Huthnance, Peter Liss, B.H. Simpson, 2012-12-06 The continental shelf seas have an importance which is out of proportion to the relatively small fraction of the area of the global ocean which they occupy. These shallow seas play an important role as the high energy boundary zones of the deep ocean where much of the ocean's tidal and wave energies are dissipated. They are highly productive biologically and are responsible for most of the world's fishery production. In many cases they are also sources of economically important resources notably hydrocarbons and they are frequently important as thoroughfares for merchant shipping. Because they are the regions of the ocean closest to our centres of population and industrial activity they have been the first to feel the impact of the increasing pressures imposed by large scale waste disposal into the ocean. The North Sea is an archetypal representative of such seas we need to be able to understand its processes and predict them if we are to achieve a degree of rational management in the future as the environmental threats increase. The understanding required extends through a wide range of processes that operate in the shelf seas from the fundamental physics to the chemistry and biology of the water column and the seabed sediments. These processes and the interactions between them cut across the traditional discipline boundaries within marine science and require a substantial inter disciplinary effort for their effective study. North Sea Region Climate Change Assessment Markus Quante, Franciscus Colijn, 2016-08-31 This book offers an up to date review of our current understanding of climate change in the North Sea and adjacent areas as well as its impact on ecosystems and socio economic sectors. It provides a detailed assessment of climate change based on published scientific work compiled by independent international experts from climate related disciplines such as oceanography atmospheric sciences marine and terrestrial ecology using a regional evaluation and review process similar to that of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change IPCC. It provides a comprehensive overview of all aspects of our changing climate discussing a wide range of topics including past current and future climate change and climate related changes in marine terrestrial and freshwater ecosystems. It also explores the impact of climate change on socio economic sectors such as fisheries agriculture coastal zone management coastal protection urban climate recreation tourism offshore activities energy and air pollution.
