Smith,2025-08-21 After a period of relative calm in congressional elections prior to 2006 America has experienced a series of highly competitive volatile national elections Since then at least one of the US House US Senate and presidency has flipped party control often with a large House or Senate seat swing with the exception of the 2012 election In Waves of Discontent Jacob F H Smith argues that a pervasive feeling of displeasure in the American public has caused this increase in electoral volatility Conducting statistical analyses of a wide array of surveys Smith found that these feelings of displeasure translate to lower turnout among voters from the president s party and a higher percentage of independents voting for the other party Subsequently he conducted a content analysis of New York Times articles to look at the connection between unrest in American society and seat swings in congressional elections even before the existence of polling Examining the consequences of volatility in congressional elections reveals that political amateurs are more likely to win in wave years than in normal years Based on this data Smith presents a new theory about the policy process the policy doom loop in which frustration among voters at both the inability of Congress to pass policy and anger at policies that actually do pass results in even more churn in congressional elections Waves of Discontent offers some suggestions to promote constructive policymaking efforts in Washington to reduce frustration in the electorate
