

Understanding Diabetes

What is Diabetes?

Diabetes is a group of metabolic diseases characterized by a chronic disturbance in the blood glucose levels. In diabetes, the body does not produce enough insulin or the insulin it produces does not work properly. Insulin is a hormone that allows glucose to enter the cells to be used for energy.

Types of Diabetes

There are three main types of diabetes: Type 1, Type 2, and Gestational Diabetes. Type 1 is an autoimmune disease where the body's immune system attacks the insulin-producing cells in the pancreas. Type 2 is the most common type, often linked to obesity and inactivity. Gestational diabetes occurs during pregnancy.

What is Insulin?

Insulin is a hormone produced by the pancreas that allows cells to absorb glucose. It acts as a key that unlocks the cells so that glucose can enter and be used for energy. Without insulin, glucose cannot enter the cells, leading to high blood sugar levels.

The liver takes up glucose, converts it into glycogen and stores it. Glucagon signals the liver to convert glycogen to glucose and release the glucose into the blood.

Type 1 Diabetes: An autoimmune disease where the body's immune system attacks the insulin-producing cells in the pancreas. This results in a total or near-total lack of insulin. Symptoms include frequent urination, excessive thirst, and unexplained weight loss.

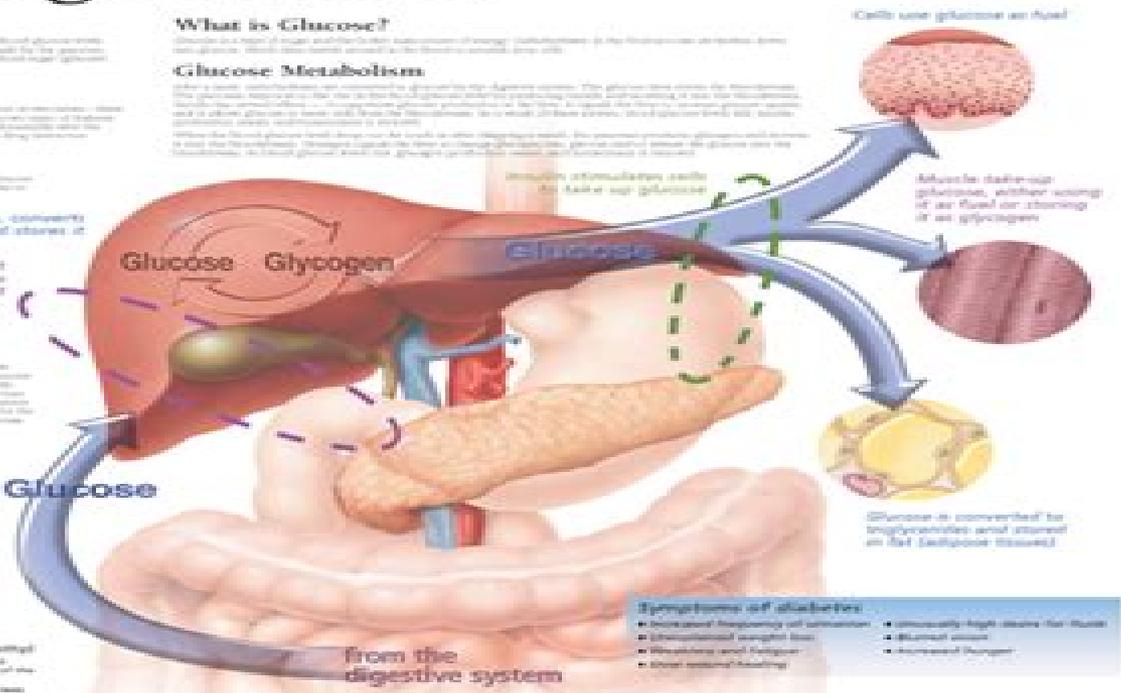

Type 2 Diabetes: A chronic condition where the body either does not produce enough insulin or the insulin it produces does not work properly. It is often associated with obesity and inactivity. Symptoms include frequent urination, excessive thirst, and blurred vision.

What is Glucose?

Glucose is a type of sugar and is the body's main source of energy. It is produced in the liver and is transported in the blood to the cells. Cells use glucose as fuel.

Glucose Metabolism

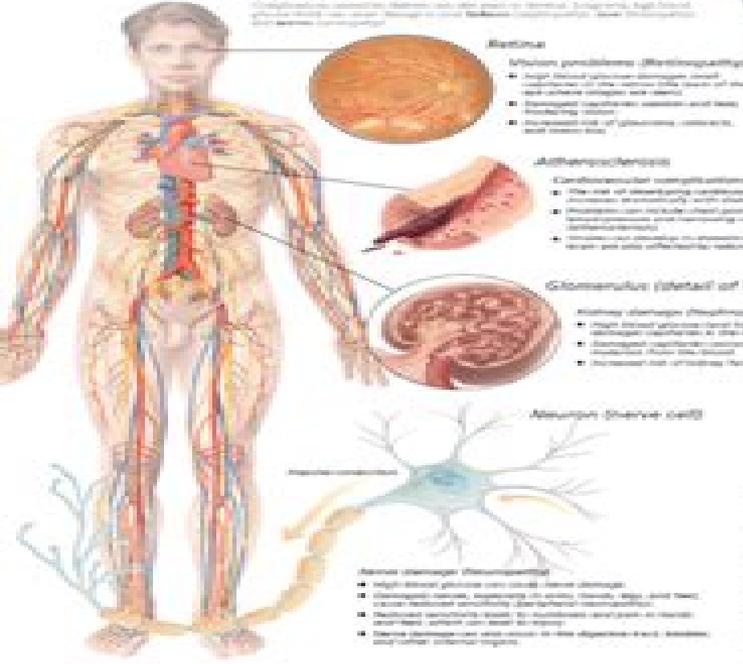

Glucose is used by the body for energy. It is converted into energy through a process called cellular respiration. The glucose is transported in the blood to the cells, where it is used for energy. The liver plays a key role in glucose metabolism, storing glucose as glycogen and releasing it when needed.

Health Complications – Long Term

Diabetes can lead to various health complications over time, including heart disease, kidney disease, and nerve damage.

Retina: Vision problems (retinopathy). High blood sugar damages small blood vessels in the retina, which can lead to blindness.

Adiposclerosis: Cardiovascular complications. The use of insulin (especially long-acting insulin) can increase the risk of heart disease. High cholesterol and high blood pressure are common in people with diabetes.

Glomerulus (detail of kidney): Kidney damage (nephropathy). High blood glucose can damage the small blood vessels in the kidney, leading to kidney disease.

Neuron (nerve cell): Nerve damage (neuropathy). High blood glucose can damage nerve fibers, leading to numbness, tingling, and pain, particularly in the feet and hands.

Health Complications – Short Term

Diabetes can lead to short-term complications, including low blood sugar (hypoglycemia) and high blood sugar (hyperglycemia). These complications can be life-threatening if not treated.

Monitoring Blood Glucose

Blood Glucose Levels (mg/dL)	Blood Glucose Levels (mmol/L)
Below a normal range (fasting blood glucose)	Below 70 mg/dL (3.9 mmol/L)
Normal range (fasting blood glucose)	70-100 mg/dL (3.9-5.6 mmol/L)
High blood glucose (fasting blood glucose)	Above 125 mg/dL (7.0 mmol/L)

Treatment and healthy lifestyle changes

Treatment for diabetes involves a combination of medication, diet, and exercise. Healthy lifestyle changes, such as regular physical activity and a balanced diet, can help manage blood sugar levels. Medication, including insulin, is used to help the body use glucose more effectively.

Foot care

Proper foot care is essential for people with diabetes to prevent complications like ulcers and infections. Regular foot exams and proper footwear are recommended.
