What Is Leukemia?

Leukemia is a group of cancers that starts in the bone marrow and produces too many abnormal white blood cells in the body. The abnormal white blood cells can interfere with the production of other types of blood cells. In some cases, the abnormal white blood cells can also interfere with the production of normal white blood cells, which causes the immune system to be weakened.

Blood Cell Development

Blood cells are produced in the bone marrow, which is the soft tissue inside the bones. The process of blood cell development is called hematopoiesis. It starts with a common stem cell called a hematopoietic stem cell, which can give rise to all types of blood cells. The stem cell can also give rise to a common myeloid stem cell, which can give rise to all types of myeloid blood cells. The stem cell can also give rise to a common lymphoid stem cell, which can give rise to all types of lymphoid blood cells.

What Is the Function of Blood?

Blood is a complex fluid that carries oxygen and nutrients to the body's cells and carries away carbon dioxide and other waste products.
