Cerebral Cortex Edward G. Jones, Alan Peters, 2012-12-06 The cerebral cortex especially that part customarily designated neocortex is one of the hallmarks of mammalian evolution and reaches its greatest size relatively speaking and its widest structural diversity in the human brain The evolution of this structure as remarkable for the huge numbers of neurons that it contains as for the range of behaviors that it controls has been of abiding interest to many generations of neuroscientists Yet few theories of cortical evolution have been proposed and none has stood the test of time In particular no theory has been successful in bridging the evolutionary gap that appears to exist between the pallium of non mammalian vertebrates and the neocortex of mammals Undoubtedly this stems in large part from the rapid divergence of non mammalian and mammalian forms and the lack of contemporary species whose telencephalic wall can be seen as having transitional characteristics The monotreme cortex for example is unquestionably mammalian in organization and that of no living reptile comes close to resembling it Yet anatomists such as Ramon y Cajal on examining the finer details of cortical structure were struck by the similarities in neuronal form particularly of the pyramidal cells and their predisposition to laminar alignment shared by representatives of all vertebrate classes
