Sustaining Export Oriented Development:

Sustaining Export-Oriented Development Ross Garnaut, Enzo Grilli, James Riedel, 1995-09-29 This book first published in 1995 looks at the East Asian economies post war development and assesses the possibilities of transferring East Asian development elsewhere Written and edited by economists Sustaining Export Oriented Development traces the changes in the thinking of policy makers and advisers about the policies required for economic development especially the changed emphasis from import substitution to outward orientation which coincided with the East Asian economies success Several contributors focus on identifying the key factors in the growth of these dynamic economies Others look at future constraints such as the environmental limits to growth and the sustainability of export growth in China This book makes a significant contribution to the discussion of economic growth and development issues and will be of interest to those in economics trade and aid and others concerned with public policy Encyclopedia of the Developing World Thomas M. Leonard, 2013-10-18 A RUSA 2007 Outstanding Reference Title The Encyclopedia of the Developing World is a comprehensive work on the historical and current status of developing countries Containing more than 750 entries the Encyclopedia encompasses primarily the years since 1945 and defines development broadly addressing not only economics but also civil society and social progress Entries cover the most important theories and measurements of development relate historical events movements and concepts to development both internationally and regionally where applicable examine the contributions of the most important persons and organizations and detail the progress made within geographic regions and by individual countries

Is China's Export-Oriented Growth Sustainable? Kai Guo, Papa N'Diaye, 2009-08 This paper assesses the sustainability of China's export oriented growth over the medium to longer term It shows that maintaining the current export oriented growth would require significant gains in market share through lower prices in a range of industries This in turn could be achieved through a combination of increases in productivity lower profits and higher implicit or explicit subsidies to industry However the evidence suggest that it will prove difficult to accommodate such price reductions within existing profit margins or through productivity gains Moving up the value added chain shifting the composition of exports diversifying the export base and increasing domestic value added of exports could give room to further export expansion However experiences from Asian economies that had similar export oriented growth suggest there are limits to the global market share a country can occupy Rebalancing growth toward private consumption would provide a large impetus to output growth and reduce the need for gaining further market share Traditional Governance and Sustainable Development in the Pacific Bikenibeu Paeniu, 1995 A working paper from the Economics Division Research School of Asian Studies the Australian National University which attempts to analyse a strategic framework within which implementation of local government policy reform can be undertaken It emphasises the necessity of highlighting the long existing traditional governing structures that are still part of the everyday life of community people in the islands It argues that traditional governance is imperative to

Oakley,2002-11-30 Ideological and cultural factors do not define or influence the way labor relations are conducted in China s workplace as many suppose they do Oakley shows that the impact of the global market has significantly altered the way labor relations are actually practiced in China which follows what she calls a global market paradigm Nevertheless Maoism and Confucianism continue to influence labor relations in China and the ideological and cultural remnants still to be found could affect China s relations with other nations for years to come Instead of taking a macro level industrial relations approach common to other studies of Chinese labor Oakley provides an in depth look at the problems emerging on the shop floor in the wake of economic reform She provides translations of actual case histories each of which details the causes of disputes the various methods that were found to resolve them and their eventual outcomes At a broader level of analysis her book tends to support convergence theories of which globalization is the latest proving that there are other features in contemporary market labor relations that have emerged in China in direct response to the demands of global competition The result is a superbly detailed examination of a topic too little covered and seldom well understood Oakley begins by considering the features of market labor relations and the emergence of a globalization friendly style in both Western and Asian economics She continues with an analysis of the ideological and cultural dimensions of the relationship between managers and managed In the next three chapters she discusses the causes resolution methods and labor dispute outcomes In each case she refers to the evidence of market Maoist and Confucian influences The conclusion she draws is that while

Confucian ideas and traces of Maoism continue to have an impact on the development and resolution of labor disputes in post reform China overall Chinese labor relations conform to the demands of the global not the provincial marketplace Can Institutional Transition Stimulate Long-run Growth? Yiping Huang,1996 A report from the economics division of the Pacific and Asian studies series The paper examines the growth and long run implications of economic reform in transitional economies concentrating on the effects of the transition rather than the transition itself An endogenous growth model is constructed for the purpose of analysis and the study identifies and investigates two distinct economic institutions central planning and the free market Includes figures tables statistics and references as well as a list of recent publications The Politics of Conservation and Sustainable Development Eduardo Silva,1994 Bridges Between Trade and Sustainable Development ,2007-02 Sustainable Agricultural Development in Southeast Asia ,2003
